Introduction

Break the Curse. Finish the Race.

Have you ever been so close to a breakthrough, you could almost taste it—only to watch it slip through your fingers at the last minute?

Maybe you've worked tirelessly on a project, launched a dream, or stood at the edge of a long-awaited opportunity—only to experience delay, disappointment, or sudden sabotage. You were almost there. Again. And again. And again.

If that sounds familiar, you're not alone. And more importantly—you're not crazy, lazy, cursed for life, or destined to fail.

There's something deeper going on. And it's time to expose it, break it, and finally cross your finish line.

I wrote this book for the gifted but stuck. For the dreamer who keeps getting doors slammed in their face. For the warrior who's fought hard but never reaps the full harvest. For the person who knows they were meant for more—but feels chained to cycles of delay, sabotage, and “almost success.”

And I want you to know: there is a way out.

For over 25 years, I've walked with people just like you—through one-on-one sessions, prophetic boot camps, deliverance encounters, mentoring programs, and online conferences seen by thousands around the globe. I've witnessed the tears. I've seen the frustration. But most importantly—I've seen the transformation.

Under my guidance, countless individuals have broken generational curses, uprooted spiritual sabotage, and stepped into a life of completion, confidence, and lasting success. I don't just teach this—I've lived it, breathed it, and helped others master it. Whether it was a mother on the verge of giving up, a businessman losing deals at the last minute, or a gifted artist who kept getting overlooked—these men and women walked away different.

Now it's your turn.

This book is your 30-day journey to break the curse of “almost there.”

Inside, we'll go deep—uncovering hidden patterns, exposing spiritual roadblocks, and reshaping your mind and habits for victory. You'll discover why you always get close but never cross over. You'll learn how to cancel spiritual contracts, build finishing habits, and unlock the anointing to complete what you start.

This isn't surface-level motivation. It's a deliverance manual for your destiny. You'll engage with journal prompts, take powerful action steps, and speak prophetic declarations to realign your life. You’ll also read testimonies from people across the world who broke through by connecting with Bishop Climate Ministries. Their stories will prove that your turnaround is not just possible—it’s inevitable.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

You might feel discouraged. Worn out. Numb from the cycle of defeat. But I want you to see something:

A different story is still possible.

A life where you don’t just start—you finish.

Where doors open—and stay open.

Where your efforts aren’t wasted.

Where your destiny is fulfilled, not postponed.

This book is broken down into four powerful weeks:

- Week 1: You’ll identify the patterns and spiritual forces behind delay and near-success.
- Week 2: You’ll uncover and heal the root causes—family curses, sabotage, word curses, and emotional wounds.
- Week 3: You’ll rewire your mind for victory and learn how to stop sabotaging your own breakthrough.
- Week 4: You’ll activate the anointing to finish, protect your progress, and unlock lasting success.

Each day includes deep teaching (without fluff), an action step, a journal prompt, real-life testimonies, declarations, and prayer points that will help you walk in power.

This journey is not just about knowledge—it's about freedom.

So, here's my challenge to you:

Don't just skim through this. Engage with it. Write. Pray. Reflect. Speak out loud. Declare war on the patterns that have kept you stuck.

You didn't pick up this book by accident. You were divinely led here because your season of delay is over.

Your transformation begins now.

Turn the page.

Take the first step.

And get ready to finish what you started.

Day 1

Why You Always Almost Make It

Have you ever asked yourself: “Why does this always happen to me?”

You put in the work. You fast. You pray. You plan. You’re right there—on the edge of something big—and then... the phone doesn’t ring. The deal doesn’t go through. The opportunity dries up. The door that was wide open suddenly slams shut.

This is the torment of the “almost there” curse.

It’s not ordinary disappointment. It’s a repeated, patterned, spiritual sabotage that leaves you just short of the finish line.

You might not see it at first. But the more you look, the more you realize—this is not random.

There’s a cycle. A spiritual script being played out in your life.

It goes like this:

- You get excited about a new opportunity
- Things move fast—doors open, progress happens
- Then, without warning, something stalls
- You either quit, get discouraged, or it falls apart on its own
- And you end up emotionally, spiritually, or financially drained

And just when you're ready to give up, another opportunity shows up. And the cycle starts again.

This book is here to tell you: That cycle is not your fault—but it is your battle.

You've been fighting an invisible pattern—and that pattern must break.

Let's call it what it really is:

A spiritual trap designed to wear you down so you never cross over.

It's the curse of "almost." Almost married. Almost successful. Almost free. Almost delivered. Almost noticed.

But never quite there.

These patterns are often rooted in unseen spiritual forces—generational curses, witchcraft assignments, soul ties, word curses, and demonic pacts made knowingly or unknowingly in your bloodline. But beyond that, they show up in your mind, your habits, your emotions. And when those go unhealed, the cycle continues—even if the opportunities change.

Have you noticed any of these signs?

- You start strong but rarely finish

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Big doors open, but something always blocks the final step
- You constantly help others win but never win yourself
- You’ve been “next in line” for years
- You feel exhausted by trying, and ashamed of not succeeding
- You feel cursed or overlooked, even though you know you’re gifted
- You’ve seen strange patterns of loss, betrayal, or confusion in your family, especially at the point of success

If any of those sound familiar—this book is your weapon.

Because once you recognize the pattern, you can finally break it.

You see, one of the most dangerous things about the “almost” curse is how normal it starts to feel.

You get so used to missing out that you begin to lower your expectations.

You stop dreaming as big.

You convince yourself that maybe you’re not ready—or maybe it wasn’t for you.

But deep down... you know you were meant to finish.

You were born to break through.

You were called to complete what others never could.

This is more than about success. It’s about freedom.

Freedom from the invisible chains that have bound your life in delay.

Dr Climate Wiseman

Freedom from the trauma of getting close and losing it all.

Freedom from spiritual systems that steal, kill, and destroy at the final hour.

Today marks your turning point.

Over the next 30 days, you're going to uncover what's been hiding behind the scenes.

You'll expose the demonic patterns and spiritual sabotage designed to keep you almost—but never there.

And by the grace of God, you'll dismantle the curse, reset your mindset, and access the anointing to finally finish what you start.

It begins today—with awareness.

Because once you name the pattern, it loses its power.

And you, my friend, are not destined to live in “almost.”

You are called to arrive.

Journal Prompts

- When was the first time I can remember getting close to a breakthrough but not completing it?
- What specific patterns do I notice in my life when things are about to succeed?
- Who in my family or community has experienced similar near-success cycles?
- What emotions rise up in me when I almost succeed and then fail?

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Do I truly believe I deserve to finish—and why or why not?

Action Step

Write down five key moments in your life where you were close to achieving something important but didn't. Note what stopped you each time. Then draw a line from each event to see if a common pattern or emotional trigger emerges.

Affirmation

I am not a victim of patterns—I am a breaker of curses.

I am chosen to finish strong, and I will not die in the middle.

Today, I recognize what's been stealing from me—and I rise to take it back.

I was not born for almost—I was born to arrive.

Testimonies

Kristof, Switzerland

“I was a high-level marketing consultant and had landed multiple contracts with international firms, but something strange always happened at the final stage—clients pulled out, delays hit, or funds vanished. After attending an online conference with Bishop Climate and receiving prophetic insight and prayer, the pattern broke. Now I not only secure contracts—I complete and renew them. My family and finances have shifted drastically. No more near-misses.”

Clara, Argentina

“For years, I was ‘almost’ engaged, ‘almost’ promoted, and ‘almost’ free from anxiety. I was gifted, hardworking, and prayed constantly, but something unseen always pushed success just out of reach. During a 30-day mentorship challenge led by Bishop Climate, I learned about hidden spiritual pacts in my bloodline. After targeted prayers and deliverance, I finally completed my degree, got engaged, and started my dream business. This ministry helped me reclaim my destiny.”

Real-Life Application

The enemy doesn’t mind if you get started—he just doesn’t want you to finish. Because the moment you finish, you become dangerous. You set a new standard. You break generational records. You testify.

Today is about more than reflection—it’s about revelation. You’re not just looking back on missed opportunities. You’re beginning to see how spiritual interference was woven into your timeline—and now, you’re being equipped to rip it out at the root.

Be honest with what you’ve seen. Let that honesty fuel your hunger for breakthrough.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “Being confident of this very thing, that He who has begun a good work in you will complete it until the day of Jesus Christ.” – Philippians 1:6 (NKJV)

12. Let the power of God surround and protect my destiny from this day forward.

Final Thought

You’ve made it to Day 1, and that’s not a small thing—it’s a declaration. You’ve decided to stop tolerating the curse of “almost” and to confront what’s been stealing from you. That alone separates you from most people.

Remember this: Awareness is the first step to deliverance. The fact that you see the pattern means you’re already rising above it.

You were created to finish strong.

Let today mark the beginning of the rest of your life—one that is not defined by almost, but by arrival.

Your breakthrough has already begun. Let’s go finish the fight.

Day 2

The Spirit of Delay – Invisible Barriers to Breakthrough

Delay is one of the enemy's most subtle and deadly weapons. It rarely comes with loud alarms. It doesn't always feel like destruction—it feels like waiting. Postponement. Pause.

But spiritual delay is more than just a matter of bad timing. It is a demonic strategy designed to wear you down so that by the time your blessing comes, you are too tired, too discouraged, or too entangled to receive it.

This is the agenda of the spirit of delay—a real demonic entity that specializes in holding up destinies, misaligning divine timing, and frustrating the plans of God in a person's life. You may feel like you're doing everything right—praying, preparing, pressing forward—but if the spirit of delay is at work, your progress can become painfully slow, your momentum blocked, and your joy drained.

Let's get real:

Sometimes delay is divine—God protecting you from what you're not ready for. But there's a delay that isn't divine at all. It's demonic.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

And the longer it goes unchallenged, the more it feels normal.

You begin to adjust your expectations. You start to think,

- “Maybe it's just not my time...”
- “Maybe I'm not as gifted as I thought...”
- “Maybe I should stop dreaming so big...”

No. That is not discernment—it's discouragement.

And behind that discouragement is a delay demon working overtime to interfere with your arrival.

Here's how it works:

- You move forward with confidence.
- Then, something small stalls you—finances, confusion, betrayal, health, unforeseen chaos.
- Your pace slows. Your motivation dips.
- You begin to doubt. You stop praying the same way.
- Then you either delay the task yourself... or circumstances force it to be postponed.
- Eventually, it never happens. Or if it does, it's years too late.

That's not God. That's war.

This is what happened to Daniel in the Bible. When he prayed, the answer was released immediately—but the Prince of Persia delayed it in the spirit realm for 21 days. God had said yes, but demonic forces tried to block the manifestation.

Dr Climate Wiseman

How many things in your life has God already said “yes” to... but delay spirits have stopped the delivery?

You see, delay isn’t about denial. It’s about exhaustion.

The enemy delays your breakthrough hoping you’ll quit before it arrives.

And for many, that’s exactly what happens. They give up in the waiting room of destiny. They get stuck in “pending.”

That ends today.

You’re not going to live your life almost healed, almost married, almost launched, almost stable, almost there.

You’re going to identify every invisible force holding up your progress—and break it at the root.

So how do you know if the spirit of delay is active in your life? Look for these signs:

- Constant postponement of opportunities
- Projects that are always “in progress” but never completed
- Chronic lateness—spiritually, emotionally, or relationally
- Repetitive dreams about blocked roads, missed buses, or lost items
- Last-minute problems that derail major moments
- Constant stagnation despite effort and prayer
- Spiritual heaviness when attempting to finish things

This is not coincidence. This is not personality. This is spiritual sabotage.

But here’s the good news: You can confront it.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

You have authority to break delay. To bind every demonic force standing in your way. To call your destiny forward on time.

Over the next 29 days, you’ll be equipped with the tools, language, and power to do just that. But today is your wake-up call.

You can’t change what you won’t confront.

Delay has cost you enough. It’s time to recover what’s been held back.

Your breakthrough is not denied—it’s due. And now, by the power of God, it’s being released.

Journal Prompts

- What are the major areas in my life that have been delayed again and again?
- How do I typically respond to delays—do I quit, shrink back, or lose faith?
- Can I identify a specific moment where delay became a pattern in my life?
- Who or what triggers the biggest detours in my progress?
- What would my life look like today if nothing had been delayed?

Action Step

Create a “Delay Map.” Draw a timeline of your life and mark every moment where you experienced delay in career, finances, relationships, or personal growth. Then circle any repeated delays. This will help you visually track how the spirit of delay may have operated in your life—and where breakthrough needs to come.

Affirmation

I am not stuck. I am not forgotten.

Every demonic delay assigned to my life is breaking now.

My destiny will manifest on time.

What has been withheld is being released.

I move forward with divine speed and supernatural alignment.

Testimonies

Ruben, Portugal

“I had been promised promotions for five years. Every time a role opened, I was told ‘you’re next.’ But something always happened—budget cuts, new hires, or the position just disappeared. After receiving one-on-one prophetic counseling with Bishop Climate, I was led in prayer to break the spirit of delay over my work life. Within three months, not only did I get promoted—I received a backdated pay increase. It was as if time had been restored.”

Teresa, Portugal

“My wedding was delayed four times—by the pandemic, by finances, by family drama, and even an accident. I started to feel cursed. A friend gave me this ministry’s prayer guide and I joined one of the 3-day boot camps. The teaching opened my eyes. After targeted deliverance and declarations, I got married within six weeks. We now lead a prayer group together and share our testimony often—delay was destroyed for good.”

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Real-Life Application

We often pray for breakthroughs but forget that timing is spiritual. The enemy knows that a blessing given too late can feel like a burden. That’s why you must learn to fight not just for results, but for divine timing.

This chapter challenges you to view every delay with discernment.

Start asking:

Is this God’s timing... or spiritual warfare?

Is this pause purposeful... or an invisible hand trying to derail me?

When you ask those questions, heaven begins to respond.

Angels are released. Wisdom is poured out. Clarity increases. And most importantly—your authority rises.

You’re not a victim of delay.

You’re a warrior in motion.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “And he said to me, ‘Do not fear, Daniel, for from the first day that you set your heart to understand... your words were heard; and I have come because of your words.’” – Daniel 10:12 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Lord, reveal every hidden cause of delay in my life.

Expose every demonic force interrupting my divine timeline.

Send Your angelic hosts to break through the resistance that has blocked my progress.

Let the gates of my destiny swing open and remain open.

Let what is mine come forth on time, in Jesus' name.

12 Prophetic Declarations

10. The time to favor me has come—and it will not be delayed.
11. My prayers are breaking through spiritual resistance.

2. I bind the spirit of delay in my career, relationships, and purpose.
3. Let every demonic traffic jam on my path be removed now.
4. I cancel every demonic appointment with sabotage and stagnation.

10. I will not settle in delay—I rise and reclaim my divine timeline.
11. I command all withheld blessings to be released now.
12. Every power working to exhaust me before my promise arrives is defeated by the blood of Jesus.

Final Thought

Delay is not just an inconvenience—it's an attack on your destiny's timing. And now that you've exposed it, you have the power to defeat it.

Your season of delay is not your story.

Dr Climate Wiseman

It's just the chapter before breakthrough.

Stand up. Speak up. Fight back.

Because what's been held up is being loosed.

And what you've been waiting for... is about to arrive.

Your divine timing starts today.

Day 3

False Finishes and Fake Starts

Have you ever felt like you finally made it—only to realize that what you thought was a breakthrough was actually a mirage?

A job offer that never became a contract.

A relationship that seemed promising but never became commitment.

A sudden opportunity that looked like destiny—but fizzled out in days.

These are what we call false finishes and fake starts.

They create the illusion of progress. They tease you with breakthrough. They dangle “almost” in your face. But in the end, they deliver nothing lasting. And the emotional toll they take is brutal.

You feel disappointed... confused... even embarrassed.

You wonder if you misheard God, made a mistake, or got too excited too soon.

But in truth, many of these experiences are spiritual decoys—crafted by the enemy to mislead, delay, or exhaust you.

And if you don't learn to discern them, you'll keep pouring energy into illusions while the real doors pass you by.

What Is a False Finish?

A false finish is a moment or season that looks like the conclusion of a process, but isn't.

It convinces you that you've arrived when really—you've only started. It tricks you into letting your guard down, celebrating too early, or ceasing prayer and preparation.

Examples include:

- Receiving an exciting phone call that leads nowhere
- Getting public attention before private maturity is developed
- Starting a business or ministry that lacks long-term vision
- Declaring “breakthrough” based on emotion, not confirmation

The danger of false finishes is that they deplete your energy and damage your trust in God, people, and even yourself. You begin to question your discernment. You get trigger-shy with new opportunities. You might even start sabotaging what's real out of fear of being fooled again.

What Is a Fake Start?

Fake starts are moments where everything looks ready—but the foundation is missing.

Think of a house with a beautiful front porch and no walls.

A relationship with passion but no purpose.

An exciting launch with no preparation.

The Bible says that a house built on sand will collapse when storms come—not because it looked wrong, but because it wasn't built right.

Fake starts are traps. They keep you stuck in cycles of starting over and over—but never moving forward. They mimic success without producing fruit. They pull your time, money, emotions, and energy into projects or people that are not divinely appointed.

Some of them are initiated by the enemy. Others are initiated by us—because we grow impatient with the process.

The danger is this: If you mistake a start for a finish, you'll stop building too soon.

If you mistake a false opportunity for a real one, you'll waste your seed.

That's exactly what the enemy wants.

Signs of False Finishes and Fake Starts

- You feel forced to “move fast” without confirmation

Dr Climate Wiseman

- Things escalate too quickly, then collapse
- You celebrate early, then get hit with unexpected problems
- You feel spiritual fatigue or emotional confusion shortly after
- God's peace is missing, even if everything looks perfect
- You realize you weren't spiritually or emotionally ready

The key to breaking these patterns is discernment.

Discernment gives you the ability to see past what's presented and hear what's true.

It lets you ask the hard questions:

- Is this opportunity from God or just a distraction?
- Is this connection divine or a test of my boundaries?
- Am I rushing this season or resting in God's process?

God is not a God of confusion. He confirms what is real, aligns your heart with His timing, and prepares you thoroughly before promotion.

If what you're stepping into doesn't bear witness in your spirit, doesn't align with your season, or causes you to neglect your assignment—pause.

Pray. Test the spirits. And don't be afraid to walk away.

Remember: The enemy knows he may not stop you... but if he can misdirect you, he can delay you.

Your energy is precious. Your assignment is sacred.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Don't waste them on doors that only look open.

It's time to say goodbye to illusions—and hello to authentic alignment.

Journal Prompts

- What are three times in my life where I celebrated too soon and later regretted it?
- What patterns or emotions led me into those false finishes or fake starts?
- Have I ever ignored my inner check or God's timing because of pressure?
- What would it look like to wait for clarity instead of rushing excitement?
- Where do I need to pause and re-evaluate something I'm currently involved in?

Action Step

Take one current opportunity, relationship, or idea in your life and place it through a discernment filter:

- Does this align with my purpose?
- Has God confirmed this in prayer or counsel?
- Do I feel peace and clarity—or pressure and confusion?
- Am I moving in faith or fear?

Write down what you discover. If necessary, adjust your involvement accordingly.

Affirmation

I will no longer mistake distractions for destiny.

I have the wisdom to wait, the strength to pause, and the discernment to move in God's timing.

I declare that every fake start and false finish is being removed from my life.

What God starts in me—He will finish through me.

Testimonies

Simon, Germany

“For years I was jumping from one business idea to another. I would get excited, launch quickly, and then crash emotionally and financially. I never finished what I started. Through a prophetic word I received at a Bishop Climate online mentorship class, I realized I was operating under a cycle of false momentum. I followed the 30-day prayer and fasting guide and waited for true clarity. Today I run a stable logistics company—my first long-term success in years.”

Madison, Germany

“I was engaged three times before I turned 30. Each relationship started fast, with passion and purpose—but something always crumbled before the wedding. After a personal one-on-one session with Bishop Climate, I learned about premature spiritual attachments and false alignment. Through prayer and inner healing, I let go of the counterfeit connections. Two years later, I'm now married to a godly man, and we just had our first child. My heart and life are finally settled.”

Real-Life Application

Many people fail—not because they don’t work hard, but because they keep starting over with the wrong things.

The enemy doesn’t just steal through failure—he steals through false hope.

And if you’re not careful, he’ll keep you celebrating emptiness and sowing into mirages.

But when you slow down, listen, and wait for divine clarity, everything changes.

You move from reacting to responding. From chasing hype to walking in purpose.

This chapter is a mirror and a sword. Let it show you where you’ve been deceived—and let it cut off every false start that’s been draining you.

You’re not here to just be busy. You’re here to build something that lasts.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “The plans of the diligent lead surely to plenty, but those of everyone who is hasty, surely to poverty.” – Proverbs 21:5 (NKJV)

Father, grant me the spirit of discernment to see what is true and reject what is false.

Deliver me from fake opportunities, counterfeit connections, and premature movement.

Let me build with wisdom and finish with grace.

10. Anoint my eyes to see beyond surface and hear beyond words.
11. Strengthen my spirit to resist emotional impulse.
12. I release my energy into what is real, fruitful, and aligned with heaven.

Final Thought

False finishes and fake starts don't just delay you—they drain you.

They create cycles of discouragement, distraction, and detours.

But you are not called to live a life of illusion. You are called to live with impact.

And that starts with wisdom, discernment, and the courage to wait for what's real.

Let this be the last time you pour into what won't pour back.

Let this be the beginning of true alignment, divine connections, and real fruit.

Dr Climate Wiseman

The real finish line is ahead. Keep going.

Day 4

When Doors Open but Never Stay Open

There are few things more heartbreaking than watching a door you were praying for finally open... only to close again without warning.

You were excited. You felt hopeful. You stepped through the opening only to find it... gone.

The opportunity vanished. The call never came. The contract got canceled. The person pulled away.

And you were left asking, “Was that even God?”

If you’ve been through this cycle more than once, chances are—you’re battling what I call the spirit of unstable opportunity.

This is a demonic attack that creates openings that look divine, feel right, even align with your desires—but are never secured, never completed, and never produce the fruit you expected.

The goal of this attack is frustration. Because when you’re frustrated long enough, you stop walking through doors altogether. You lose confidence. You fear hope. You hesitate to try again.

But it doesn't have to be that way.

The Pattern of Unstable Opportunity

This attack often follows a predictable pattern:

1. A door opens suddenly—job, ministry, relationship, investment.
2. You get excited and engage quickly.
3. Out of nowhere, the situation changes or falls apart.
4. You feel confused, embarrassed, or even betrayed.
5. You internalize the loss and begin to doubt your discernment.
6. You move forward hesitantly or not at all—out of fear it'll happen again.

This cycle can delay destinies for years—especially if you start believing that maybe you just “can’t finish,” or worse, that “God keeps teasing” you. But God is not cruel. And He doesn’t deal in confusion.

So the question becomes: How do I know if this door was from God—or not?

7 Ways to Know if a Door Is From God

1. It Aligns with Your Assignment, Not Just Your Ambition
 - God’s doors match your purpose. If the opportunity excites your ego but distracts your mission, it’s not from Him.
2. It Comes with Peace, Not Just Passion

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- God’s doors don’t need to be forced open. Even if there’s warfare, your spirit will have peace—even when your soul feels stretched.
- 3. It Passes the Test of Time
 - Divine doors don’t expire in 24 hours. You won’t be rushed into something you haven’t had time to pray through. Real opportunities allow for wisdom.
- 4. It Doesn’t Violate Your Boundaries or Convictions
 - God will never ask you to compromise your values for a “blessing.” If the open door requires you to sin, manipulate, or hide, it’s a trap.
- 5. It’s Confirmed in Prayer and Counsel
 - God’s voice is echoed in wise counsel, divine nudges, and clarity—not pressure or manipulation. Multiple confirmations are often a green light.
- 6. It Doesn’t Drain You—It Builds You
 - Every opportunity costs something. But if a door leaves you consistently empty, anxious, or disoriented, it may not be God’s will.
- 7. It Bears Fruit, Even in Small Beginnings
 - Even if a divine door starts small, it produces growth. It multiplies peace, purpose, impact, or clarity—not just activity.

Closing Cycles Before Completion

The real tragedy of unstable opportunities is that they teach your spirit to expect loss. You start assuming that nothing good will last. You hold your breath at every new blessing, waiting for it to fall apart.

That mindset is a spiritual stronghold—and it must be broken.

The enemy's goal is to get you to abort your assignment prematurely—to stop investing in what God gave you because of past disappointments.

But hear this: Just because a door closed doesn't mean it was your fault.

Some doors were never yours. Some were counterfeit. And some were real—but you weren't ready yet.

What matters now is this: You stop internalizing rejection as identity, and you start discerning the difference between doors meant to test you—and doors meant to grow you.

This chapter is your moment of truth.

You may have walked through doors that didn't stay open.

But you're about to walk through one that never closes again.

Journal Prompts

- What's one opportunity I thought was from God that closed unexpectedly? How did it affect me emotionally and spiritually?
- Have I ever confused pressure with confirmation?
- Do I tend to jump into open doors without discernment?
- What habits or fears do I carry because of past closed doors?

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- How would I approach new opportunities differently now?

Action Step

Write out the “last three doors” that opened in your life but didn’t stay open. Reflect on:

- How they opened
- Why they closed (if known)
- What you learned
- What warning signs you ignored

Ask the Holy Spirit for insight and begin to release any lingering confusion, shame, or frustration from those moments.

Affirmation

I do not chase every open door—I walk through the right one.

My steps are ordered. My peace is my confirmation.

I break every cycle of false access and unstable opportunity.

The door God opens for me, no man can shut.

Testimonies

Gift, United States

“I had three job offers in a row that all felt like ‘the one.’ Each time I packed up, planned ahead, even relocated—only for the positions to fall through after contracts were signed. It made me feel like God was playing games with me. Through Bishop Climate’s mentorship series and deliverance teachings, I realized I was dealing with a spirit of instability tied to my family line. After applying the daily declarations and prayers, I finally secured a job that has lasted three years with continuous promotion.”

Eva, Chile

“I was engaged twice—both times to men who seemed perfect. Each engagement ended suddenly, without real explanation. I started to believe love just wasn’t for me. During a one-on-one session with Bishop Climate Ministries, it was revealed that a spirit of delay and sabotage was assigned to my relationships. After renouncing soul ties and completing a 30-day fast with specific declarations, I met my husband, and we just celebrated our two-year anniversary. This ministry gave me back my hope—and my stability.”

Real-Life Application

Opportunities don’t just come—they’re either sent by heaven or allowed by hell. Your job is to test every door before you walk through it. Don’t assume that just because it’s open, it’s safe. Don’t let emotions override discernment.

You are not desperate. You are destined.

From now on, every opportunity must submit to purpose, peace, and proof.

This shift in mindset will protect you from unnecessary pain, wasted time, and broken momentum. And most importantly—it will prepare you for the right door.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Because it’s coming. And this time—it’s going to stay open.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “I have set before you an open door, and no one can shut it...” – Revelation 3:8 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Lord, I ask for discernment to know which doors are from You.

Close every door that’s not aligned with my purpose.

Heal me from the wounds of unstable opportunities.

Teach me to wait on the door You’ve appointed, and to walk boldly when You open it.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I declare every unstable door in my life is closing for good.
2. I walk only through doors assigned and anointed by God.
3. The cycle of premature openings and sudden closings is broken.
4. I will not mourn over what was never mine.
5. My discernment is sharp and my steps are protected.
6. What God opens, no man, spirit, or system can shut.
7. I will not be fooled by flashy distractions.
8. I am not desperate—I am aligned.
9. My season of instability is over.
10. God is releasing divine doors with lasting favor.
11. My access is secure and my momentum is protected.

12. I declare stability, sustainability, and strength in every new season.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Father, close every door in my life that You did not open.
2. I bind the spirit of unstable opportunity and confusion in Jesus' name.
3. Lord, release divine favor on doors that are assigned to my destiny.
4. Remove every counterfeit opportunity meant to distract or delay me.
5. Let every door meant for my breakthrough open and stay open.
6. I declare stability in my job, relationships, and purpose.
7. Silence the voices that push me to move before I'm ready.
8. Give me supernatural discernment to recognize divine timing.
9. Heal my heart from every disappointment caused by sudden loss.
10. Assign angels to guard the doors of my destiny.
11. Let peace confirm my next step, not pressure or fear.
12. I walk boldly into the open doors of God—and I finish what I start.

Final Thought

Doors that open and slam shut without warning can do more than delay your destiny—they can break your spirit. But today, you’ve learned to stop chasing access and start seeking alignment.

You’re not here to knock on every door. You’re here to walk through the right one—the one God keeps open with power, peace, and purpose.

This time, you won’t lose it.

This time, you’ll finish it.

And this time—it will last.

Get ready. The right door is opening—and it’s not going to close.

Day 5

The High Cost of One Step Short

There's a specific type of pain that doesn't come from failing completely—it comes from almost winning.

Almost getting the deal.

Almost getting married.

Almost being healed.

Almost being chosen.

This is what I call near-success trauma—the pain of getting so close to something you prayed for, only to lose it just before crossing the finish line.

That pain is often invisible to others. People see your strength, your resilience, your public smiles. But they don't know that deep down, you carry scars from being one step short. And those scars shape the way you move forward—or don't.

You start to hold back. You stop fully engaging. You become cautious, hesitant, or numb.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

It's not that you don't believe God can do it. You just don't want to be disappointed again.

This is one of the enemy's greatest strategies:

Not just to block your blessing—but to condition your mind to expect disappointment.

The Psychology of Near-Success Trauma

When you experience repeated near-breakthroughs—where everything looks like it's working, but collapses at the final moment—your brain starts to form protective habits:

- You lower your expectations to avoid pain.
- You prepare for the worst, even when praying for the best.
- You sabotage opportunities to prevent being hurt again.
- You convince yourself that maybe this level of success “isn't for you.”

That is not humility—that's unhealed trauma.

And when left unhealed, near-success trauma becomes a stronghold.

A stronghold is not just a bad thought—it's a mindset that blocks the power of God from flowing freely in your life.

You may be anointed... but your mind has built a wall of defense to avoid further pain.

And that wall doesn't just keep pain out—it keeps breakthrough out too.

One Step Short: A Spiritual Pattern

This isn't just emotional—it's spiritual.

Many people live under a demonic pattern that allows them to get to the edge of success but never cross over. It can manifest as:

- Getting invited but never selected
- Starting projects but never finishing
- Attracting opportunities that collapse last minute
- Being promised promotion but never receiving it
- Constantly helping others win, but never advancing yourself

These patterns are often rooted in family altars, word curses, witchcraft, or generational covenants that were designed to delay or sabotage your destiny. The enemy doesn't mind you getting close—as long as you never complete.

And because your mind becomes familiar with disappointment, it slowly begins to cooperate with the curse. You prepare for loss before you even begin.

But today, that ends.

The Hidden Cost of Quitting Too Soon

Most people don't stop because they're lazy—they stop because they're wounded.

The cost of giving up one step short includes:

- Missed destiny
- Delayed timelines

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Emotional exhaustion
- Unfulfilled potential
- Shame and regret
- Repeating cycles of “almost”

But the greatest cost is what happens to your identity.

You start seeing yourself as the one who never finishes.

You call it reality—but really, it’s rehearsed rejection.

And that’s not who you are.

You are not a failure. You are not cursed. You are not disqualified.

You’re someone who’s survived sabotage and is now being equipped to overcome it.

God is not asking you to fake strength—He’s inviting you to heal.

He’s not condemning your fear—He’s confronting the lie that says it’s too late.

Because it’s not too late.

You are one step closer than you think.

Journal Prompts

- What was one moment in my life where I stopped one step short—and why?
- How has near-success trauma affected the way I approach new opportunities?

- What emotions or thoughts rise up when I'm close to completing something?
- What lie do I believe about myself that needs to be broken today?
- What would I pursue again if I truly believed I couldn't fail?

Action Step

Choose one unfinished assignment, goal, or dream you've put on the shelf because of past disappointment. Write it down. Then write why you stopped pursuing it.

Ask God to reveal whether that pause was fear-based or faith-led.

Then commit to taking one small step toward revisiting it with new strength.

Affirmation

I am not my past disappointments.

What didn't work before will not define what works next.

God is healing every wound and rewiring my mind for victory.

I finish strong. I recover what I lost. I will not die one step short.

Testimonies

Tobias, Canada

“I was on the verge of securing a seven-figure investor for my tech company. We had meetings, contracts, and verbal agreement. Then, three days before the signing, everything collapsed. I fell into depression and didn’t pursue new funding for over a year. I joined a virtual prophetic mentorship with Bishop Climate and learned about near-success trauma and demonic delay. After deliverance prayer and consistent declarations, I reopened a new funding round. Within four weeks, I secured two new investors and broke the curse that followed me for years.”

Sophie, South Africa

“As a singer, I had several close calls—music competitions, record deals, major performances. Every time, I reached the top 5 or final round, but never won. I felt like I was being spiritually blocked. During a women’s online boot camp through Bishop Climate Ministries, I realized I had internalized the belief that I would never be ‘good enough.’ I went through a 21-day healing journey and began speaking life over my gift again. Since then, I’ve recorded two albums, and doors have opened that I never imagined possible.”

Real-Life Application

Your past failures are not just events—they are spiritual invitations to either shrink or rise.

Every time you gave up one step short, the enemy took ground.

But today, you reclaim it.

This time, you won't bow to disappointment.

You won't flinch at the final hour.

You'll finish—and when you do, you'll see that everything you lost wasn't wasted. It was preparation for this moment.

You are not weak—you are wiser now.

And wisdom, when paired with healing, produces unstoppable finishers.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “Let us not grow weary while doing good, for in due season we shall reap if we do not lose heart.” – Galatians 6:9 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Lord, I surrender every unfinished thing in my life into Your hands.

Heal me from the trauma of stopping one step short.

Give me courage to trust again, to hope again, and to finish what I started.

Break every curse of almost-success.

Let this be the season where I cross over—and never look back.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I break the curse of stopping one step short.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

2. I am not afraid of finishing—I am anointed to finish.
3. My past does not define my future.
4. Every failure is being transformed into fuel for success.
5. I reject the lie that says I will never make it.
6. I rise above trauma and enter triumph.
7. My heart is healed, and my vision is restored.
8. I am crossing the line of completion with boldness.
9. I recover every opportunity I walked away from in fear.
10. I finish what I start and do it with excellence.
11. God is restoring what I thought was lost.
12. I will not die in delay—I will live in destiny.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Father, expose every wound from past failures that still influences me today.
2. I bind and cast out every spirit of fear, trauma, and disappointment.
3. Let every demonic pattern of stopping short be broken now.
4. Heal my memory and renew my expectation of success.
5. I call back the anointing of completion over my life.
6. Restore my courage to try again.
7. Silence every internal voice that tells me I can't finish.
8. Strengthen me at the point of weakness and weariness.
9. Let every unfinished blessing in my life be completed.
10. I reject emotional sabotage and mental defeat.

11. I receive fresh vision, fresh strength, and divine timing.
12. My ending will be greater than my beginning—in Jesus' name.

Final Thought

The pain of being one step short is real—but it's not permanent.

God doesn't just want you to survive your past. He wants to redeem it.

What looked like failure was training. What looked like loss was a setup.

And what looked like the end was really the beginning of your comeback.

You're not standing at the edge anymore.

You're stepping through.

This time, you finish.

This time... you win.

Day 6

Cycles of Distraction, Discouragement, and Delay

You start strong. You're clear, excited, full of fire.

But somewhere in the middle—before breakthrough, before reward—you stop.

Sometimes slowly, sometimes suddenly.

Not because you're lazy. Not because you're not gifted. But because something hijacked your focus and killed your momentum.

This is not just a personality flaw. It's a spiritual pattern.

A threefold cord of distraction, discouragement, and delay—a demonic cycle designed to stop you from reaching completion.

The devil doesn't need to destroy you if he can simply distract you.

He doesn't need to steal your gift if he can discourage you enough to leave it unused.

He doesn't need to deny your progress if he can delay it long enough to make you give up on your own.

How the Pattern Works

1. Distraction

Something always comes up. A phone call. A crisis. A conflict.

You plan to sit down and finish the project, call the mentor, launch the idea—and suddenly, a wave of chaos hits.

The enemy introduces noise to pull you away from what really matters.

You don't even notice it at first, because it feels urgent. But it's designed to re-route your energy.

2. Discouragement

Once your focus is broken, frustration sets in. You feel behind. You start doubting yourself.

Thoughts like “Maybe this isn't worth it” or “Who do I think I am?” creep in.

The excitement you had at the start evaporates.

You begin comparing yourself, questioning your calling, and rehearsing past failures.

3. Delay

Now that your focus is scattered and your motivation is low, delay kicks in.

You tell yourself “I'll do it tomorrow”... but tomorrow becomes next week.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Next week becomes next month.

And without realizing it, you’ve dropped something God told you to finish.

The enemy wins—not through destruction, but through delay.

You didn’t fail. You just stopped.

This is spiritual warfare in disguise.

And if you don’t recognize the pattern, you’ll think the problem is you—when it’s actually the strategy of hell.

Why the Middle Is the Battleground

Every divine assignment has a middle.

The beginning is exciting. The end is rewarding.

But the middle? That’s where battles are won or lost.

In the middle, there’s no applause. No instant results. No guaranteed outcome. Just grind.

And that’s exactly where the enemy hits hardest.

Because if he can take your focus in the middle, he can rob your harvest at the end.

But there’s hope. Because today, you’re becoming aware—and awareness is your first weapon.

You now have language for what’s been happening.

And soon, you’ll have the tools to break the cycle once and for all.

7 Signs You're Stuck in the Cycle

1. You start many things but rarely finish.
2. You constantly shift focus when things get hard.
3. You feel easily overwhelmed and distracted during moments of growth.
4. You battle intense discouragement just before reaching major milestones.
5. You have a long list of “almosts” and half-finished projects.
6. You're productive but not fruitful.
7. You feel spiritually delayed, even when working hard.

If these sound familiar—don't beat yourself up.

This pattern is not permanent. It's a tactic. And tactics can be broken.

You're about to learn how.

1. Pray for discernment in the middle.
 - The moment you feel resistance, pause and pray. Ask, “What's really going on here?”
2. Create spiritual boundaries.
 - Protect your time of focus like it's sacred—because it is. Don't answer every call, engage every text, or entertain every crisis.
3. Speak life into your middle.
 - Begin declaring that what you started, you will finish. That what tried to delay you will accelerate you.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

4. Assign a finisher’s reward.
 - Give yourself a meaningful celebration or outcome for finishing each stage. Motivation is a weapon.
5. Stay planted in purpose, not emotions.
 - Emotions shift—purpose remains. Don’t quit because you feel off. Stay rooted in your why.
6. Break the spirit of distraction in prayer.
 - Distraction is not just natural—it’s spiritual. Bind it and cast it out.
7. Declare delay illegal.
 - Every time something tries to hold you back, declare that divine timing is now and the delay is broken.

Journal Prompts

- What’s one thing I started that I still haven’t finished—and why?
- When I lose focus, what usually distracts me first?
- What discouraging thoughts do I hear most often in the middle of a project or goal?
- How does delay typically show up in my life?
- What would change in my life if I broke this cycle completely?

Action Step

Identify one area in your life where the cycle of distraction, discouragement, and delay has been strongest.

Write down:

- How the distraction came
- When the discouragement hit
- What was delayed as a result

Then, pray and ask God to help you re-engage with that unfinished thing and complete it this month. Set a deadline. Make a plan. Declare that the cycle is broken.

Affirmation

I am focused. I am faithful. I am free from distraction.

I reject the lies of discouragement and delay.

What I start, I will finish.

My purpose is stronger than my feelings, and my assignment will not be interrupted.

The cycle ends with me.

Testimonies

Nikita, Spain

“For years, I’d start music projects, ministry ideas, even relationships—with full fire. But halfway through, I’d lose momentum. Something always distracted me or made me feel like it wasn’t worth it. Through Bishop Climate Ministries, I learned about spiritual warfare in the middle stages of destiny. I began using targeted declarations and breaking soul ties to confusion.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Now, I’ve finished three full projects, including launching my worship album. I finally feel free.”

Victoria, Kenya

“My academic journey was a disaster. I dropped out twice. Every time I tried again, something distracted or discouraged me—a breakup, money problems, even health issues. After attending an online deliverance session with Bishop Climate, it was revealed that my family carried a spirit of delay. I broke the covenant through fasting and focused prayer. I’m now a graduate, running my own business, and finishing what I start with strength.”

Real-Life Application

The enemy wants you to feel defeated so you’ll act defeated.

He wants your focus fragmented, your confidence shaken, your timeline delayed.

But when you rise up and say, “I know what this is—and I won’t fall for it anymore,” everything shifts.

Your spiritual focus is your survival tool.

It keeps you grounded when emotions lie.

It keeps you moving when fear whispers.

And it keeps you finishing when hell tries to interrupt.

This time, you’re not quitting in the middle.

You’re walking all the way through.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “Let your eyes look straight ahead; fix your gaze directly before you. Give careful thought to the paths for your feet... do not swerve to the right or the left; keep your foot from evil.” – Proverbs 4:25–27 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Lord, I renounce every demonic cycle of distraction, discouragement, and delay.

Restore my focus, rebuild my discipline, and reignite my motivation.

I declare my steps are sure, my timing is divine, and my mind is sound.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I am free from the cycle of distraction and delay.
2. My focus is protected and my mind is clear.
3. I reject every thought of giving up or backing down.
4. What I begin, I will complete in divine timing.

7. I cancel every demonic appointment of discouragement.
8. I declare divine acceleration over what was delayed.
9. I break every word curse of failure or stagnation.
10. I walk with vision, strength, and confidence.
11. The enemy cannot interrupt what God has ordained.

12. This is my season to finish strong—no more detours.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Father, expose every pattern of distraction that derails me.
2. I bind every spirit of mental fog, confusion, and fragmentation.
3. Let every discouraging voice be silenced in Jesus' name.
4. I cast down every imagination that exalts itself above the knowledge of God.
5. Strengthen me in the middle of every assignment, Lord.
6. I declare divine clarity and holy discipline over my life.
7. Let every delay tactic assigned to my purpose be destroyed.
8. Restore every opportunity that was lost to spiritual sabotage.
9. I decree my focus will not be broken by stress, people, or fear.
10. I call back every unfinished project and release completion grace.
11. Empower me to overcome weariness and resist distraction.
12. I seal my timeline in the blood of Jesus—no more delay.

Final Thought

Distraction is not just a nuisance—it's an assassin.

Discouragement is not just a feeling—it's a weapon.

Delay is not just bad timing—it's a spirit.

But you are not defenseless.

You are focused. You are fortified. You are called to finish.

So today, refuse to give in.

Fix your gaze. Lock in.

And don't stop—not until it's done.

Your breakthrough is on the other side of focus.
Go get it.

Day 7

Recognizing the 'Almost There' Triggers in Your Life

You know that feeling.

You've been working toward something important. You're one step away from launching, completing, stepping into your moment.

Then, suddenly... it happens.

You get overwhelmed.

You start doubting yourself.

You distract yourself.

You delay.

You self-sabotage.

And you tell yourself, "I'll finish it tomorrow."

But tomorrow turns into next week.

Next week becomes next month.

And once again, what you were almost there for slips through your fingers.

This pattern often has nothing to do with external forces—it's driven by internal triggers.

An “almost there” trigger is anything—emotional, environmental, relational, or spiritual—that activates your fear of finishing. It causes you to subconsciously resist the very thing you were praying to complete.

Let's be clear: The devil doesn't always need to attack you overtly.

Sometimes, he just needs to press the right trigger—and you'll stop yourself.

The Science of a Triggered Mind

Your brain is wired for safety. And it doesn't differentiate between real danger and emotional discomfort.

So whenever something from your past—shame, rejection, fear of failure—gets stirred up, your brain hits the brakes.

It's not that you're incapable of success—it's that you're subconsciously trained to avoid it.

And this is why so many people never cross the finish line.

They don't need more talent. They need healing.

They don't need another open door. They need to disarm the alarm system in their soul that screams, “Don't go further—it's not safe.”

These triggers show up strongest when you're right at the edge.

Common “Almost There” Triggers

1. Fear of Judgment – You worry what others will say if you actually succeed.
2. Fear of Failure – You fear success won’t last, so you avoid trying.
3. Perfectionism – You believe it must be flawless, or it’s not worth finishing.
4. Comparison – You begin to doubt yourself because someone else seems ahead.
5. Emotional Flashbacks – A past failure resurfaces in your mind, paralyzing your progress.
6. Sudden Fatigue or Procrastination – Your body or mind starts “shutting down” under pressure.
7. Toxic Environment – People around you sow doubt, chaos, or spiritual heaviness as you approach breakthrough.

These triggers aren’t random. They are part of a spiritual and psychological loop designed to keep you in cycles of delay, self-sabotage, and shame.

But awareness is power. When you recognize your triggers, you can break them.

How to Break Subconscious Barriers

1. Name It Out Loud – When you feel the shutdown coming, say: “This is a trigger. It’s not truth.” Exposing it weakens its power.
2. Track the Pattern – Journal or track when you tend to quit. Is it right after progress? Right before completion? After someone's comment? Identify the pattern.

3. Pray Through Emotional Roots – Ask God to reveal the memory or wound the trigger is attached to. Often, unhealed trauma fuels the emotional reaction.
4. Establish New Habits at the Trigger Point – When you feel the urge to stop, create a new ritual: speak a declaration, take a prayer walk, or do a small task toward completion.
5. Change Your Environment – If certain people or places fuel discouragement, limit exposure while you build strength.
6. Anchor Yourself in Purpose – When triggers hit, remind yourself of your why. Write it, speak it, declare it. Let purpose override panic.
7. Be Gentle But Firm With Yourself – Don't shame yourself. Speak kindly to your inner world, but don't let feelings sit in the driver's seat.

Journal Prompts

- When do I usually stop working toward something I care about?
- What emotions rise up when I'm close to success?
- Who or what in my environment has contributed to self-sabotage?
- What past event might be fueling my fear of finishing?
- What new response can I create when I feel triggered to quit?

Action Step

Today, choose one known trigger that stops your momentum. Create a “Trigger Response Plan”:

- Name the trigger.
- Identify what it’s connected to (emotionally/spiritually).
- Create a new response action (pray, declare, shift environment, call accountability partner).
- Write this plan on a notecard or phone and keep it visible for the next 30 days.

Affirmation

I recognize every pattern that tries to stop me—and I break it.

I am not controlled by fear, fatigue, or perfectionism.

I finish what I start because I am healed, chosen, and focused.

My emotions bow to my purpose, and my past has no power over my present.

This is my season to follow through.

Testimonies

Marek, Italy

“I used to abandon projects as soon as I was close to finishing. I thought I had a discipline issue, but Bishop Climate’s ministry showed me I was carrying a subconscious fear of exposure. I was afraid that if I finished something, I'd be judged. Through deliverance sessions and prophetic mentoring, I was healed from childhood trauma and shame. Now, I'm completing projects with peace and power."

Daria, Norway

"Every time I'd get close to launching my business, something inside me would freeze. I blamed distractions, but deep down I was scared of actually being successful. After joining a 30-day deliverance prayer series led by Bishop Climate, I learned about emotional triggers and broke the spirit of delay. I launched within the next month and now coach other women on how to finish strong. The cycle broke with truth and prayer."

Real-Life Application

The battle is not always out there—it's in you.

And the closer you get to breakthrough, the louder the internal resistance may become.

But today, you're choosing a different path.

You're no longer reacting to emotions or shrinking from your power.

You're recognizing the pattern, and declaring—I will not stop. Not this time.

Let God show you the roots. Let truth reset your mind.

And let grace guide you into completion.

You are becoming the version of you that finishes.

Let nothing stop you—not even you.

Completion begins in the mind. And your mind has just shifted.

Day 8

The Spirit of Sabotage—Within and Without

Sabotage doesn't always come from outside.

Sometimes, the biggest enemy to your progress is you.

Other times, it's the people smiling in your circle.

Either way, sabotage—internal or external—is one of the enemy's most effective weapons to stop you from crossing the finish line.

Many people aren't fighting lack of opportunity.

They're fighting self-sabotage: hidden fear, perfectionism, procrastination, or unhealed trauma that causes them to ruin what they were meant to build.

Others aren't fighting personal weakness.

They're fighting spiritual opposition disguised as relationships—friends who shift when you elevate, mentors who subtly compete, family who remind you to "stay humble" right when you're ready to rise.

This is the spirit of sabotage. And it doesn't play fair.

Understanding the Spirit of Sabotage

Sabotage is a spirit that seeks to interfere with, delay, or destroy your progress—especially when you're near completion.

It often hides behind logical reasoning, emotional reactions, or human behavior, but its goal is clear: to keep you in cycles of “almost there.”

There are two types of sabotage:

1. Internal Sabotage:

This is when you disrupt your own progress due to:

- Fear of success or failure
- Unhealed trauma that triggers quitting
- Impostor syndrome (“I’m not good enough to finish”)
- Perfectionism or procrastination
- Emotional exhaustion or burnout
- Guilt about outgrowing others

2. External Sabotage:

This comes from outside forces or people used by the enemy:

- Jealous friends or family who discourage or distract you
- Strategic attacks, gossip, or betrayal when you're about to launch
- Spiritual warfare disguised as relational tension
- Doors that shut due to others' insecurity, envy, or manipulation

- “Supporters” who subtly stall your momentum

The strategy is the same in both cases: create enough tension, fear, or chaos that you back away from your assignment before it's done.

Why Sabotage Targets You at the Finish Line

The spirit of sabotage doesn't waste energy on people going nowhere.

It attacks people carrying impact.

It waits until you're close—when the book is almost done, the application is almost sent, the business is almost launched. Then it sends confusion, doubt, offense, or fear to disrupt the birth.

It's what happened to Moses when he struck the rock instead of speaking—he let anger sabotage his promise.

It's what happened to Samson when he trusted the wrong woman.

It's what happens every time a person filled with purpose hands the enemy their keys—right before completion.

But it stops now.

You will not betray your own success.

You will not abort your own mission.

You will not be broken by those who were never called to build with you.

Signs of the Spirit of Sabotage

Internal Signs:

- You delay or avoid finishing what you start, even when you want to succeed.
- You panic when you're about to be seen or celebrated.
- You start fights or pick arguments near the finish line.
- You shrink back after progress instead of pushing forward.
- You believe success will isolate you or make you unlovable.

External Signs:

- People suddenly withdraw or turn on you as you rise.
- You notice increased attacks, rumors, or distractions when momentum grows.
- Supporters shift into critics without cause.
- You get overwhelmed with “help” that actually delays you.
- Doors close without explanation when others get involved.

Breaking the Power of Sabotage

I. Repent for partnering with fear or self-sabotage.

- You must renounce every internal agreement you've made with the enemy's voice.

2. Cut off access to voices of delay.
 - Even well-meaning people can be used to derail you. Distance matters.
3. Reframe success as your assignment—not a threat.
 - You're not selfish for growing. You're obedient for finishing.
4. Surround yourself with divine alignment.
 - Walk with those who celebrate your completion, not just your process.
5. Create boundaries that protect your momentum.
 - You don't owe anyone an explanation for prioritizing purpose.
6. Declare the end from the beginning.
 - Speak it until your soul believes it: I will finish what I started.

Journal Prompts

- What are the top 3 ways I sabotage my own progress?
- Who in my life adds confusion or delay when I try to grow?
- What am I afraid might happen if I succeed?
- What part of me still believes I'm not worthy to finish?
- How can I build stronger boundaries and habits that support finishing?

Action Step

Write a letter to yourself as if you’ve just completed your goal.

Describe how you feel, what you’ve overcome, and who stood by you.

Then underline anything in that letter that makes you emotional.

Ask yourself: Is this where sabotage usually begins?

Use this exercise to uncover your personal pattern—and prepare your plan to break it.

Affirmation

I will not sabotage what God has started in me.

I silence every voice—internal or external—that delays my destiny.

I am not afraid of finishing. I am not afraid of rising.

I will not play small to keep others comfortable.

The spirit of sabotage is broken. I will finish strong.

Testimonies

Nathan, Argentina

“I would always sabotage my success by suddenly pulling back. I’d ghost clients, stop promoting my brand, or ‘lose interest’ when things got serious. Through Bishop Climate’s mentorship series, I realized I had an internal vow rooted in childhood rejection—I was afraid to be seen. Through prayer, fasting, and focused declarations, I broke it. Now I finish strong—and I’ve doubled my income.”

Leah, Finland

“I thought my fear was about failure. But it was actually fear of outshining others. I sabotaged myself by over-helping others while ignoring my own projects. After going through deliverance with Bishop Climate Ministries, I broke soul ties to guilt and learned to honor my own growth. I just published my first book and now coach women in confidence. The sabotage cycle is done.”

Real-Life Application

You don’t have to be perfect to finish—you just have to stop quitting.

You don’t need everyone to agree—you just need to stay aligned.

And you don’t need to be fearless—you just need to be faithful.

Sabotage wants to use your emotions, history, or people to block you.

But the moment you recognize it, you regain power.

This chapter is a spiritual alarm clock.

You’re waking up to patterns that once kept you stuck—and choosing to rise anyway.

10. Strengthen my boundaries against people-pleasing and distraction.
11. Let every sabotaging assignment be reversed and replaced with favor.
12. Anoint me to complete what others couldn't—and to finish well.

Final Thought

The spirit of sabotage wants to convince you that you're your own worst enemy.

But the truth is—you are God's chosen finisher.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

You're not bound to old habits. You're not cursed to self-destruct.

You're aware now. You're aligned now.

And you are equipped to walk all the way through.

This time, the cycle breaks.

This time, the door stays open.

This time, you finish.

Day 9

Family Patterns of Unfinished Blessings

Have you ever looked at your family history and noticed a troubling pattern?

- Dreams started but never finished.
- Businesses launched but quickly failed.
- Marriages entered with hope but ended in pain.
- Talented people stuck in poverty or obscurity.
- Breakthroughs that came close—but never lasted.

You may be battling more than just personal obstacles—you may be confronting a generational curse of unfinished blessings.

These cycles often go undetected for years. We call them “bad luck,” “coincidence,” or “just how life is.” But they are spiritual systems that recycle defeat through the bloodline, especially when someone gets close to breaking free.

Near-success syndrome is not just a personal battle.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

For many, it’s inherited.

Understanding Generational Cycles

A generational cycle is a recurring pattern of behavior, struggle, or spiritual resistance passed down through family lines. These cycles can be fueled by:

- Word curses (spoken declarations of defeat or limitation)
- Unrepented sin or bloodline covenants
- Demonic altars or spiritual contracts
- Repeated trauma, fear, or failure
- Emotional inheritance—guilt, shame, sabotage

If your parents, grandparents, or great-grandparents experienced chronic frustration near the point of success, chances are you’re not just experiencing a pattern—you’re carrying it.

But the good news is this: God gives you the authority to break it.

You don’t have to repeat what they couldn’t finish.

You can be the one who says, “This stops with me.”

Signs of a Generational “Almost There” Curse

1. Long family history of incomplete education, broken engagements, or abandoned businesses
2. Multiple family members with chronic financial failure, despite gifting or effort

3. Repeated losses just before major milestones (weddings, births, promotions)
4. Dreams always delayed—never denied outright, but never fulfilled
5. Spiritual heaviness or strange resistance when making progress
6. Ancestral stories of war, migration, or crisis that interrupted legacy
7. Family sayings like “Nothing ever works for us” or “We don’t get lucky”

These are not coincidences. They are indicators of spiritual interference.

And cycles—whether biological or demonic—can only continue until someone with authority stands up to break them.

The Power of Standing in the Gap

In Ezekiel 22:30, God says: “I looked for someone among them who would build up the wall and stand before me in the gap...”

Every bloodline needs a gap-stander—someone who will say, “I see the pattern. And I refuse to pass it down.”

That someone is you.

You have the authority to:

- Renounce every spoken curse or agreement with failure.
- Break every covenant made by your ancestors.
- Dismantle spiritual altars and soul ties tied to delay.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Release your family from guilt, shame, and self-sabotage.
- Establish a new bloodline rooted in blessing, legacy, and completion.

You are not here to just survive—you are here to rewrite the script.

Journal Prompts

- What unfinished patterns do I see in my parents, grandparents, or siblings?
- What recurring losses or delays have I experienced at the same life stages as my family?
- Have I internalized any phrases or beliefs that limit success?
- What am I afraid might happen if I succeed beyond my family’s history?
- What would it look like to become the first to finish strong?

Action Step

Create a “Family Pattern Timeline.”

List significant events, losses, or failures in your family history—especially things that happened right before breakthrough.

Pray over each pattern and declare, “This ends with me.”

Then write a new statement of blessing over your bloodline that your future children will read.

Affirmation

I am not bound by my family's failures.

I honor my heritage, but I do not inherit limitation.

Every cycle of delay, defeat, or unfinished blessing is broken.

I am the one God has raised to finish what others could not.

My bloodline shifts through my obedience and authority.

Testimonies

Salim, Ukraine

“For three generations, every man in my family started a business but lost it within five years. I followed the same path—twice. After connecting with Bishop Climate Ministries, I discovered this was a family curse. I went through deliverance, sowed a seed of completion, and fasted for 21 days. My third business has now passed the five-year mark and is expanding. I didn't just break the curse—I reversed it.”

Elena, Senegal

“In my family, no woman had ever stayed married more than 3 years. I got engaged and began experiencing extreme anxiety and conflict. I almost called it off. Through the teaching on generational soul ties in Bishop Climate's online conference, I broke the covenant of marital instability. I declared restoration over my name. We married and are thriving five years later. I became the first—and not the last.”

Real-Life Application

You don't fight alone.

You are part of a spiritual lineage.

And whether your natural family supported your calling or not, you have a spiritual Father who has anointed you to finish.

You're not just finishing for you.

You're finishing for every ancestor who didn't make it—and for every descendant who will rise because you did.

You are the bloodline breaker.

And your family will know freedom because you chose to stand.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “He redeemed us from the curse... so that the blessing given to Abraham might come to the Gentiles.” – Galatians 3:13-14 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, I come before You on behalf of my bloodline.

I repent for every agreement, vow, or sin that gave delay access to my family.

I break every generational curse of almost-there blessings.

Let every altar of defeat be dismantled.

I declare a new legacy begins with me—in Jesus' name.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I declare the curse of unfinished blessings in my bloodline is broken.
2. I will not repeat the delays or failures of my ancestors.
3. I release my family from spiritual bondage and soul ties to failure.
4. I am the first of many to walk in generational favor.
5. Every pattern of sabotage, near-success, or loss is dismantled.
6. I redeem the time and restore what was stolen in my lineage.
7. I carry the mantle of completion, not confusion.
8. What others couldn't finish, I will bring to fulfillment.
9. My children will inherit purpose, not pain.
10. God's covenant of blessing rests on my bloodline now.
11. I walk in the blessing of Abraham, not the bondage of man.
12. I decree: My family finishes strong—from this generation forward.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, reveal every hidden curse or covenant tied to my family's failure.
2. I repent for the sins of my fathers and ask for cleansing over my bloodline.
3. I break every generational altar of delay, defeat, and "almost there."
4. Let every pattern of limitation and fear be uprooted in Jesus' name.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

5. Release the mantle of completion over my life and family.
6. I bind the spirit of sabotage that flows through family cycles.
7. I cancel inherited shame, guilt, and poverty.
8. I declare a new pattern—of favor, wisdom, and progress.
9. Let angels of generational restoration fight on my behalf.
10. I call forth divine alignment and spiritual legacy.
11. May my testimony become the new story of my family.
12. I declare this generation will cross every finish line—for God’s glory.

Final Thought

Generational cycles end with decision.

You don’t need a perfect family history to fulfill a divine destiny.

You just need a willing heart, spiritual authority, and the boldness to say,

“This stops with me.”

You are not who your family used to be.

You are who God has called you to be.

The curse is broken. The finish line is in sight.

Now run—and take your whole legacy with you.

Day 10

Witchcraft, Envy, and Word Curses

Some people don't lose momentum because they're lazy, weak, or unprepared.

They lose it because something targeted them spiritually.

Yes—witchcraft is real.

Envy carries spiritual weight.

And words spoken in malice or manipulation can shift the atmosphere around you, limit your movement, or delay your destiny—if you don't know how to fight back.

Many people who suffer from the “almost there” curse are not just fighting natural barriers. They are under spiritual siege.

They don't know why everything was flowing smoothly until one conversation, one conflict, one unexpected setback.

But behind that moment was a curse, a jealous heart, or an evil altar working to stop them from reaching completion.

You may have felt it:

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Strange fatigue when working on your dream
- Consistent delay after sharing good news
- Doors that open—then suddenly slam shut
- Relationships that shift without reason
- Thoughts of quitting right after receiving breakthrough

These are not coincidences. They are spiritual attacks.

But today, your eyes are opening—and what’s been attacking you is about to backfire.

What Is a Word Curse?

A word curse is a spoken declaration—conscious or unconscious—that invokes harm, delay, or destruction.

They can come from:

- People who envy your progress
- Leaders or mentors who feel threatened
- Family members operating under generational jealousy
- “Friends” who speak negatively while pretending to support you
- Your own lips, through self-doubt, fear, or sarcasm

Words are spiritual weapons. The Bible says, “Life and death are in the power of the tongue” (Proverbs 18:21).

And just like blessings create momentum, curses create resistance.

How Witchcraft Shows Up in the Modern World

Forget the Hollywood image of spells and potions. Real witchcraft often looks like:

- Manipulation and emotional control
- Strategic delay through spiritual interference
- Evil altars raised to block your name, finances, or progress
- Monitoring spirits sent to track your movements
- Repetitive patterns of frustration that begin after conflict with a jealous person

Some of these attacks come through dreams. Others come through objects, environments, or relationships.

The goal of witchcraft is to control, distract, or dismantle your divine assignment—especially when you're getting close.

The Spirit of Envy: A Silent Killer

Envy isn't just an emotion. It's a spirit.

It's the same spirit that led Cain to kill Abel... Joseph's brothers to sell him... and Saul to try and kill David.

It hides behind fake support, empty applause, and smiling criticism.

When envy is left unchecked, it speaks curses—whether verbally or spiritually.

- “She doesn't deserve that.”
- “He thinks he's better than us.”

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- “I hope it doesn’t work out for them.”

Every time you step into purpose, someone somewhere may resent it.

But their jealousy doesn’t get to write your story—unless you let it.

Recognizing Spiritual Interference

How do you know when you’re under attack?

- 1. Sudden, unexplained fatigue right before a breakthrough
- 2. Confusion, mental fog, or intense distraction when trying to complete something important
- 3. Financial strain, rejection, or opportunities falling through after speaking to certain people
- 4. Recurring dreams of backward movement, loss, or delay
- 5. Repeated cycles of “almost there” with no natural explanation

When these things begin to line up, you’re likely dealing with spiritual resistance. But you have authority to break it.

Breaking the Power of Spiritual Attacks

- 1. Repent for any participation—intentional or unintentional—in speaking curses or opening doors.

2. Break all word curses spoken over you—by others or yourself.
3. Cancel the power of jealousy, evil altars, and witchcraft in prayer.
4. Anoint your space, your plans, and your mouth with declarations of completion.
5. Speak blessings over your future—even when warfare rises.
6. Protect your progress by guarding your circle and your confession.

No more misplaced trust. No more unguarded updates. No more open doors for spiritual sabotage.

Journal Prompts

- Who have I allowed to speak over me that may not carry my best interest?
- What delays or patterns have begun after envy, betrayal, or strange conversations?
- Have I spoken negative words over myself or my progress?
- What dreams, visions, or feelings have warned me of spiritual attack?
- How can I protect my destiny from witchcraft and word curses going forward?

Action Step

Write down the last five people you shared your good news with.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Reflect: Did something shift afterward?

If so, renounce every word, emotion, or spiritual transfer tied to that exchange.

Pray over your name, your project, and your timeline.

Declare: No one's jealousy can cancel what God has written for me.

Affirmation

No word curse, witchcraft, or jealous spirit can stop what God has ordained.

I cancel every spoken or unspoken attack over my life.

I release my name, my destiny, and my timeline from delay.

I rise above envy, and I finish what I started—in victory.

Testimonies

Kwesi, Belgium

“Every time I shared my ideas with a certain friend, things would fall apart. I thought it was coincidence—until I couldn’t finish three major projects in a row. During a live teaching with Bishop Climate, I learned about word curses and monitoring spirits. I prayed, fasted, and stopped oversharing. Now I’ve completed all three projects and my life is moving forward. I guard my destiny now—and nothing is stopping me.”

Asma, Australia

“I used to battle strange sleep paralysis, financial setbacks, and sudden confusion—especially when I was launching new business deals. Bishop Climate’s prayer points on breaking witchcraft helped me discern that a jealous cousin had been speaking against me. After specific deliverance prayers and sealing my home with anointing oil, the heaviness broke. Now I sleep in peace, and I move in authority. The attacks no longer work.”

Real-Life Application

You are not paranoid.

You’re discerning.

Spiritual attacks are real—but so is your authority.

Witchcraft may target your progress.

Envy may come after your glow.

Word curses may try to stop your finish.

But none of it can stand when you take your position in prayer, protection, and power.

This isn’t just about finishing anymore.

It’s about fighting for your future.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture: “No weapon formed against you shall prosper, and every tongue which rises against you in judgment you shall condemn.” – Isaiah 54:17 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, I take authority over every curse, spell, word, and assignment sent against my progress.

I break every altar raised to delay or destroy my destiny.

Expose every jealous voice, every evil agreement, and every hidden attack.

Cover me with divine fire.

Seal my plans under Your blood.

And let every weapon formed fail—starting today.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I cancel every word curse spoken over my name, dreams, or progress.
2. No witchcraft or evil altar shall prosper against me.
3. I reverse every spiritual attack in the name of Jesus.
4. I walk in the power and covering of divine protection.

Final Thought

Your delay may not be about your lack of effort—it may be about spiritual resistance.

But now you're equipped.

You know how to fight.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

You know how to guard your name, protect your vision, and move with authority.

The spirit of witchcraft is broken.

Every jealous curse is canceled.

And your finish line is clear again.

Now walk through it—bold, covered, and untouchable.

Day 11

The Burden of Carrying Others and Dropping Yourself

You are the one everyone calls when they're in trouble.

The counselor. The rescuer. The listener. The fixer.

You give. You show up. You pour out.

But somehow, when it's your turn—when you need support, resources, or celebration—it's... quiet.

And slowly, you learn to expect it.

You put your own dreams on hold.

You silence your needs.

You cheer others on from the sidelines while your own finish line fades from view.

This is the burden of carrying others while dropping yourself—a spiritual and emotional trap that leaves the strongest ones secretly empty.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

And if you're not careful, it becomes your identity: the martyr, the sacrificial one, the silent struggler who gets others across the line, but never crosses it themselves.

When Helping Becomes Hurting

Helping others is godly.

But sacrificing yourself to the point of self-erasure is not divine—it's destructive.

You were not created to:

- Build everyone else's house while your own collapses
- Celebrate everyone else's wins while hiding your own pain
- Fund others' dreams while leaving yours unfunded
- Show up for others and forget how to show up for you

This is not humility. It's a toxic martyr spirit that the enemy uses to make sure you're always needed but never fulfilled.

God didn't call you to die empty because you never paused to refill.

He called you to be a finisher—not just for others, but for yourself.

Signs You're Living the Martyr Pattern

- i. You often say “yes” even when it costs you peace or progress.

2. You feel guilty investing in your own vision.
3. You're afraid that if you pull back to focus on yourself, people will leave or suffer.
4. You secretly resent helping others because your own needs are unmet.
5. You've mastered the art of rescuing others—but you feel stuck yourself.
6. You don't feel worthy of receiving the same help you give.

These signs are not just emotional—they're spiritual indicators of a demonic strategy to exhaust your oil before your own miracle comes.

The enemy knows that if he can keep you distracted helping everyone else, he can delay your own finish line indefinitely.

Breaking the Pattern: You Deserve to Finish Too

God did not assign you to be everyone's savior.

He already filled that position.

Your role is not to burn out carrying others.

Your role is to rise up, carry your cross, and complete your calling.

Here's how you begin breaking the martyr pattern:

1. Give yourself permission to be the priority.
 - o You're not selfish for choosing yourself. You're being spiritually strategic.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

2. Stop rescuing people God never told you to carry.
 - Ask: Am I helping out of purpose—or guilt and fear?
3. Set sacred boundaries around your focus and time.
 - Just because you can help doesn't mean you're called to.
4. Heal the root of people-pleasing.
 - Often, this pattern is rooted in rejection, low self-worth, or childhood survival.
5. Let yourself receive what you freely give.
 - You deserve mentorship, rest, investment, and joy—just like those you serve.
6. Prioritize your own finish.
 - You cannot pour from an empty vessel—or finish someone else's race while neglecting your own.

Journal Prompts

- What roles have I taken on in people's lives that are draining me?
- How often do I delay my own plans to rescue or help others?
- What emotions rise when I try to focus on myself?
- Do I feel guilty saying no—even when I'm overwhelmed?
- What would finishing my assignment look like if I truly let go of guilt?

Action Step

Write a list titled: “People I Carry.”

Beside each name, write: “Was I assigned to carry them—or did I pick this up out of guilt, fear, or habit?”

Now write a new list titled: “What I’ve Dropped.”

List the dreams, goals, or responsibilities you’ve postponed while helping others.

Now choose one thing you dropped—and pick it back up today.

Affirmation

I break the pattern of sacrificing myself to serve others.

I am called to finish, not just to support.

I will no longer pour out until I’m empty.

I carry wisdom, not burnout.

My destiny matters—and I give myself permission to rise.

Testimonies

Anders, Tanzania

“As a pastor’s kid, I was always the helper—carrying others, praying for others, encouraging others. But my own dreams always came last. Bishop Climate’s teachings helped me realize I was operating under a martyr spirit. I repented, set new boundaries, and finally launched the youth initiative I had delayed for 5 years. Now I serve from overflow—not exhaustion.”

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Jade, Scotland

“Every time I tried to focus on my business or healing journey, someone in my circle had a crisis. I’d drop everything. I felt guilty for even resting. After going through the 30-day mentorship with Bishop Climate, I finally saw the enemy’s tactic. I broke the guilt, released toxic responsibility, and launched my coaching program. Now I help others without losing myself.”

Real-Life Application

This chapter is your permission slip to choose you.

You can still be compassionate without being consumed.

You can support others without sacrificing your destiny.

Jesus served people—but He also rested, prayed alone, and finished His assignment without apologizing for it.

So can you.

This time, you’re not dropping yourself for others to rise.

You’re choosing to rise with clarity, power, and peace.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Heal me from guilt, fear, and people-pleasing.

Let this be the season I pick myself back up and finish my race.

11. I am free from the spirit of burnout and martyrdom.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, expose every place where I’ve sacrificed myself to serve others.
2. I break the spirit of false burden, guilt, and religious obligation.
3. Help me discern who I’m truly assigned to carry—and who I’m not.
4. Give me grace to release relationships that drain and distract.
5. Anoint me to walk in wisdom, balance, and self-respect.
6. Heal the roots of people-pleasing and performance-based love.
7. I repent for neglecting my own calling out of fear.
8. Restore the vision I dropped while carrying others.
9. Let divine boundaries protect my assignment and peace.
10. Empower me to say yes to purpose—and no to guilt.
11. Fill me until I serve from overflow, not depletion.
12. Seal this shift in my identity and path, in Jesus’ name.

Final Thought

You were never meant to carry the world while forgetting your worth.

You were never created to exhaust yourself so others could thrive.

God is not glorified by your burnout—He is glorified by your obedience.

Dr Climate Wiseman

This is the day you stop dropping yourself.

Pick up your dream. Pick up your voice. Pick up your finish line.

You matter, too. And this time—you won't forget it.

Day 12

Soul Ties That Keep You Stuck

You're trying to move forward. You've prayed. You've planned. You've fasted.

But something keeps pulling you back—an invisible weight, an emotional tug, a memory or person you can't quite let go of.

Sometimes, the thing delaying your destiny isn't a demon—it's a soul tie.

Soul ties are emotional, mental, or spiritual bonds formed through deep connection, intimacy, loyalty, or trauma.

Some are healthy—like godly marriage or covenant friendships.

But others are toxic chains that hold you in places God is trying to deliver you from.

And if you don't cut the wrong soul ties, you'll stay emotionally bound to people, relationships, and seasons that no longer serve your purpose.

You may feel stuck—but what’s really happening is that your soul is still tied to something (or someone) behind you.

What Is a Soul Tie?

A soul tie is formed when your emotions, will, or identity become entangled with another person.

They are created through:

- Sexual intimacy (whether in or out of marriage)
- Deep emotional attachment
- Repeated conversations, secrets, or shared trauma
- Submission to spiritual leadership or mentors
- Unresolved grief or resentment

When the tie is unhealthy, it acts as a spiritual leash:

- You keep thinking about someone you know isn’t good for you.
- You keep helping people who drain you.
- You’re drawn back to relationships or environments that stifle your growth.
- You carry emotional residue from old wounds, breakups, or betrayals.
- You can’t fully step into your future because your soul is still living in your past.

Signs of a Soul Tie That Keeps You Stuck

1. You feel emotionally exhausted or confused after interacting with someone.
2. You dream of someone you’ve left, but they keep appearing in moments of progress.
3. You hear their voice when you’re about to take a bold step.
4. You feel guilty moving forward if they’re not involved.
5. You lose clarity or confidence when they reenter your life.
6. You sabotage relationships or assignments because of unresolved ties to someone else.

Soul ties don’t just delay you emotionally. They create spiritual blockages that:

- Open doors to sabotage and oppression
- Transfer emotions or demonic influence
- Delay divine connections and breakthroughs
- Keep you repeating cycles with different faces but the same bondage

To finish well, you must finish clean.

You can’t carry uncut ties into a completed destiny.

How to Break a Toxic Soul Tie

1. Acknowledge the connection.
 - Denial keeps you bound. Honesty sets you free.

2. Repent for ungodly bonds, soul-level loyalty, or idolatry.
 - Some ties began in sin. Others began in fear or co-dependency.
3. Renounce every agreement made through words, acts, or emotions.
 - Even silent vows like “I’ll always be here for you” can become demonic contracts.
4. Declare your soul untied in prayer.
 - Use your authority. Your words carry power to separate what is unhealthy.
5. Anoint your soul with peace and clarity.
 - Replace what was cut with the presence of God. You are not just releasing—you are healing.
6. Set real-life boundaries.
 - Stop returning to the text thread, the social media profile, or the memory that reactivates the tie.

Journal Prompts

- Who am I still emotionally or mentally tied to, even though the relationship is over?
- What patterns in my life point to unresolved soul-level connections?
- Have I ever made emotional vows or deep promises to people that need to be broken?
- What guilt or grief am I holding onto that keeps me from moving forward?
- What would freedom feel like if I finally let go?

Action Step

Write a letter (you don't have to send it) to the person or memory your soul is tied to.

Pour out the truth. Acknowledge the bond.

Then, at the end of the letter, declare:

“Today, I cut every soul tie—emotional, spiritual, physical, or mental—between me and [Name]. I release them from my soul. I reclaim my peace, my power, and my destiny. In Jesus' name.”

Burn or delete the letter after reading it aloud as a prophetic act of closure.

Affirmation

I am not bound to my past.

I break every emotional tie that delays my future.

I am free—spirit, soul, and body.

My heart is healed. My mind is clear. My destiny is mine.

I release what was. I step fully into what's next.

Testimonies

Victor, Kenya

“I was engaged for two years, and the relationship ended abruptly. Even though I moved on physically, I couldn't move forward emotionally. I kept comparing new opportunities to my ex, and I lost focus. After joining Bishop Climate's soul tie deliverance session, I realized I had made vows in that relationship that spiritually bound me. I cut those ties, burned old gifts, and declared my release. Within months, I met my wife and launched my dream business. My soul had to be free before my destiny could manifest.”

Aurora, United States

“My biggest soul tie wasn’t romantic—it was with a toxic mentor. She was controlling, manipulative, and always made me feel small. I stayed for years out of loyalty. After discovering Bishop Climate’s teachings on spiritual soul ties, I renounced every word curse, broke the emotional bond, and restored my identity in prayer. Since then, my creativity and voice returned. I now mentor others from a place of freedom, not fear.”

Real-Life Application

Sometimes what’s slowing you down isn’t demonic attack—it’s emotional attachment.

You can’t move forward if your soul is stuck in yesterday.

You don’t have to hate them.

You don’t have to explain.

You just have to let go.

Let go of the emotional leash.

Let go of the guilt.

Let go of the hope they’ll change, apologize, or come back.

Your future is calling—and it’s calling you alone.

- 12. Seal my deliverance with joy, clarity, and permanent release.

Final Thought

You cannot finish a new chapter with your soul tied to an old one.

Cutting a soul tie doesn't mean you're unloving—it means you're obedient.

The future cannot open fully until the past is closed properly.

So today, take the scissors of faith.

Cut the cords.

Reclaim your soul.

And run forward—lighter, freer, and ready to finish strong.

The tie is broken. The delay is over. The breakthrough is here.

Day 13

When Good Things Get Blocked by Old Agreements

You've prayed. You've fasted. You've even received prophecies confirming your breakthrough.

So why does it feel like something keeps blocking the good things that are supposed to be yours?

Every time an opportunity rises, something shuts it down.

Every time love enters your life, it leaves before it can grow.

Every time you're about to finish strong, something pulls you backward.

This is often the effect of old spiritual agreements—hidden covenants, soul pacts, and unbroken vows you may not even remember making.

You can't step fully into your new if your soul is still contracted to your old.

What Are Spiritual Agreements?

Spiritual agreements are unseen contracts that your soul makes—consciously or unconsciously—with people, spirits, or belief systems.

These agreements may have been:

- Spoken out loud (“I’ll never trust again” / “I always mess things up”)
- Formed in trauma or rebellion
- Made in past relationships, religious experiences, or emotional moments
- Inherited from family traditions, cultures, or bloodline rituals
- Created through witchcraft, occult practices, or unauthorized spiritual exchanges

Even after time passes, the covenant still stands—until it is consciously renounced.

These old agreements act like spiritual locks—holding your progress hostage, blocking new blessings, and tying your future to the unfinished business of your past.

Common Types of Old Agreements

1. Vows of Self-Protection – “I’ll never let anyone get close to me again.”
2. Soul Promises in Past Relationships – “We’ll always be connected.”
3. Inner Vows Made in Pain – “I’m just not meant to succeed.”

4. Ungodly Family Covenants – Dedications made without your consent
5. Agreements with False Identity – “This is just who I am.”
6. Agreements Formed Through Witchcraft or the Occult – Even one visit to a psychic, tarot reading, or charm can activate a covenant.

These agreements give spiritual legal rights to the enemy—access to block progress, sabotage relationships, or keep you circling the same mountain.

How Agreements Block Good Things

- You attract relationships that mirror old trauma.
- You find yourself stuck in the same type of job or toxic atmosphere.
- Every time a door opens, fear, confusion, or conflict shuts it.
- Divine opportunities feel delayed, drained, or easily disrupted.
- You lose momentum, then blame yourself—when it’s really an agreement at work.

God may be trying to send something new—but the spiritual terms of your past are still active.

The breakthrough isn’t denied—it’s being legally challenged by an unbroken pact.

How to Break Old Agreements

1. Identify the agreement.
 - Ask yourself, What did I say, accept, or participate in that may have created a covenant?
2. Repent and renounce it.
 - Your repentance breaks the access. Your renunciation voids the contract.
3. Speak the opposite.
 - If you once said, “I’ll never love again,” now say, “I am free to receive healthy love.”
4. Break emotional or spiritual ties connected to the agreement.
 - Declare separation from every soul tie, memory, or influence that keeps the agreement active.
5. Anoint and seal your life with new declarations.
 - Replace every “never” with a divine “now.”

Journal Prompts

- What statements or beliefs have I repeated that may have created hidden covenants?
- Have I ever been part of a spiritual experience (witchcraft, religion, vow) that may still be affecting me?
- Are there places in my life where I always feel blocked, no matter how hard I try?
- What emotions or memories rise when I try to step into something new?
- What soul agreements do I need to renounce today?

Action Step

Write a list titled: “Agreements I Break Today.”

Include every memory, phrase, vow, person, or practice the Holy Spirit reveals.

Then, one by one, speak aloud:

“I break every agreement made with [name/situation/belief]. I renounce its power and cancel its influence over my life. I am free. I am released. I belong to God—and I step into His promises, now.”

Afterward, anoint your hands, head, and feet as a sign of complete freedom—mind, body, and movement.

Affirmation

I am not bound to old covenants.

I break every hidden agreement with failure, fear, and delay.

I cancel every soul pact that stands against my progress.

God’s promises are mine—and nothing from my past can block them anymore.

I am free to move forward, finish well, and walk boldly into my blessing.

Testimonies

Samuel, Colombia

“Even after giving my life to Christ, I kept hitting invisible walls in my business and relationships. I later discovered that my grandmother had dedicated our family line to a local spirit. During a deliverance session with Bishop Climate Ministries, I renounced that ancestral covenant and broke ties with all old family altars. After that, deals started flowing, my health improved, and I married the woman of my dreams. The blockage was spiritual—and now it’s broken.”

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Natalie, Colombia

“I had made emotional vows with a man I was never meant to marry. Even after moving on, nothing in my life felt free. I’d attract the same toxic relationships and face delay in every area. Through Bishop Climate’s teaching, I renounced every soul tie, broke the words I spoke in the past, and reclaimed my identity. Within a few months, I was offered a promotion I’d waited two years for. My freedom came through breaking the agreement.”

Real-Life Application

Sometimes the roadblock isn’t what’s in front of you—it’s what’s behind you, still speaking.

But now, you’re rising in spiritual authority.

No more hidden contracts.

No more sabotage disguised as personality.

No more unconscious loyalty to bondage.

You are not obligated to agreements your healed self would never make.

Break them. Replace them. And walk into freedom.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

*“Can two walk together, unless they are agreed?” – Amos 3:3
(NKJV)*

Prayer Focus:

Lord, reveal every hidden agreement that is delaying my destiny.

Show me what I said, accepted, or partnered with that gave the enemy access.

I repent. I renounce. I revoke.

Let Your divine agreement now override every demonic one.

I seal this deliverance in the blood of Jesus. Amen.

- 10. I am aligned with God’s promises and favor.
- 11. Every hidden chain is broken today.
- 12. I walk forward, free and unstoppable.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

- 1. Lord, expose every hidden vow or agreement still affecting my life.
- 2. I break every covenant made in fear, trauma, or deception.
- 3. Let every demonic contract over my name be burned by fire.
- 4. I renounce every soul tie that sustains these agreements.
- 5. Release me from every vow I made in pain or rebellion.
- 6. Anoint me to speak life where I once spoke limitation.
- 7. I cancel every generational pact made by my ancestors.

- 10. Restore every opportunity stolen by old agreements.
- 11. Cover my mind and identity with truth and clarity.
- 12. I walk in the power of divine agreement from this day forward.

Final Thought

What you agree with spiritually, you give permission to operate.

But today, the permission is revoked.

The contract is canceled.

And the curse is broken.

You don't belong to fear.

You don't belong to failure.

You belong to God—and His promise is your only agreement from now on.

Walk in freedom. Live in alignment. Finish with power.

Day 14

Generational Curses of Failure at the Finish Line

You've been working hard, praying hard, and staying consistent.

But right at the moment of breakthrough, something slips through your fingers—again.

You've watched this pattern not just in your own life, but in your family history too.

People who were gifted but never recognized...

People who built but never inherited...

People who got close but never finished.

This is the evidence of a generational curse of failure at the finish line.

A curse is not just a word; it's a system of resistance that repeats itself across generations.

You are not imagining the pattern—you're living inside one.

But today, that pattern is being exposed—and you have the power to reverse it.

What Is a Generational Curse?

A generational curse is a demonic pattern passed through bloodlines due to sin, spiritual agreements, or unrepented transgressions.

Curses are legal structures in the spirit realm. If not broken, they continue to operate, often manifesting as:

- Chronic failure in business, love, or health
- Cycles of delay and discouragement in every generation
- Gifts without recognition or reward
- Unexplained blockages at the point of progress
- Sickness, accidents, or loss at key turning points
- A family reputation for “almost” making it

These curses are like invisible walls—you see the promise, but you can’t step into it.

But God has equipped you not only to recognize these curses, but to break them permanently.

How These Curses Begin

Generational curses often begin with:

- Covenants made by ancestors (with idols, witchcraft, cults, or secret societies)

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Blood sacrifices or dedications made without your consent
- Chronic sin repeated in the family line
- Bitterness, unforgiveness, or spoken word curses passed from parent to child
- Failures to repent after breakthrough moments that became doorways for the enemy

Even if you didn't start the cycle, if you don't break it—you will repeat it.

How Failure at the Finish Line Looks Spiritually

1. Every time someone in your family builds something great, it collapses right before the reward.
2. Marriages in your bloodline start well but end in shame, infidelity, or financial ruin.
3. Education is pursued but rarely completed—especially by the most gifted.
4. Death or sickness interrupts people in their prime.
5. The curse “rests” until someone is about to rise—then strikes with chaos or fear.

It is not a coincidence. It is a curse.

But today, you are not only exposing it—you are dismantling it.

How to Break the Curse

1. Acknowledge the Pattern

- Don't justify or normalize the failure. Call it what it is—a spiritual stronghold.

2. Repent on Behalf of the Bloodline

- Stand in the gap. Repent for the sins of your forefathers, even if you didn't commit them.

3. Renounce Every Generational Covenant

- Speak out loud: "I break every agreement made by my ancestors that has given the enemy access to my finish line."

4. Anoint Your Timeline

- Prophetically anoint your calendar, contracts, and major dates—declare that nothing will interrupt this season.

5. Replace the Curse with the Blessing

- Declare Deuteronomy 28: "I am blessed going in and blessed coming out... I am the head and not the tail..."

Journal Prompts

- What generational patterns of unfinished victories do I see in my family?
- Who in my bloodline came close to success but was cut short?
- What pain, shame, or loss is repeated at turning points in my family history?
- What blessings do I feel have been delayed or denied because of inherited patterns?
- What would it look like to become the first to finish?

Action Step

Draw a generational tree of your family.

Next to each name, write any known patterns of loss, delay, or failure near the point of success.

Then write your own name in bold—and beneath it write:

“Here, the curse breaks. I am the finisher in my family.”

Pray over the tree and prophetically tear it up as a sign that the old system is ending with you.

Affirmation

I am not bound by my family’s failure.

I am the interruption to every cycle of delay, defeat, and sabotage.

I carry a finisher’s anointing.

Every curse of near-success failure breaks now.

My life will be the proof that generational curses can be broken and reversed.

Testimonies

Henrique, Chile

“In my family, no man had ever kept a job for more than three years. I was the most qualified but always got fired right before promotion. I found Bishop Climate’s ministry online and attended a deliverance boot camp. I broke covenants my grandfather had made through freemasonry, repented for bloodline sins, and sowed a seed of restoration. Since then, I've held a senior role at one company for five years and just bought my first house. The curse ended—and favor began.”

Harper, Brazil

“Every woman in my family had children out of wedlock, with dreams abandoned by age 30. I was headed down the same path. During a 30-day fast led by Bishop Climate, I received a revelation about a generational altar of disappointment. I prayed, anointed my home, and publicly renounced the curse. I'm now married, raising two kids, and finishing my law degree. What was once a cycle is now a testimony.”

Real-Life Application

You don't just break curses for you—you break them for every generation after you.

You are the bloodline shift. The spiritual game-changer. The finisher your family never had.

Yes, the enemy has tried for generations.

But now, he has run into you.

You are spiritually equipped, emotionally healed, and prophetically positioned to complete what others could only dream of.

This is the chapter where the curse ends—and the legacy begins.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Christ has redeemed us from the curse... that the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles.” – Galatians 3:13–14 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, I thank You for redeeming me from every curse.

I repent for every sin, vow, or covenant in my bloodline that opened the door to failure.

10. I decree new patterns of blessing and success in my lineage.
11. May my testimony rewrite the story of my family.
12. Seal my bloodline under the covenant of Christ and the power of His resurrection.

Final Thought

Curses lose their power when someone rises with revelation, repentance, and authority.

That someone is you.

Your obedience today will echo for generations.

Your faith has already begun the shift.

And the finish line you cross will open paths your family has never seen before.

This is where the curse breaks.

This is where the blessing begins.

And this time—your family finishes.

Day 15

Break the Identity of “Almost Enough”

You’ve been striving, pushing, praying—but deep inside, there’s a nagging voice that whispers:

“You’re not quite there.”

“You’re not ready.”

“You’re almost enough—but not really.”

This is not just a mindset. It’s an identity—the identity of “almost.”

You don’t just experience near-success—you start to believe it’s who you are.

You become used to almost winning.

Almost being chosen.

Almost being seen.

Almost finishing.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

And without realizing it, you start adjusting your goals, relationships, and vision downward to match your internal expectations.

This is the curse of “almost enough”—and it must be broken at the root.

The Curse of a Compromised Identity

Before the enemy can block your success, he first attacks your identity.

Because if you believe you're not enough, you'll:

- Settle for less than you deserve
- Quit before you reach the finish
- Self-sabotage when doors finally open
- Undervalue your voice, gift, or potential
- Expect rejection instead of favor
- Hide behind false humility to mask fear

This identity doesn't scream failure. It whispers inadequacy.

And that whisper is enough to kill destiny.

Where “Almost Enough” Comes From

This identity is often shaped early—through pain, rejection, or comparison.

It can come from:

- A parent who never affirmed you
- A teacher who praised others but criticized you

- Being “second place” repeatedly—so you accepted it
- Constantly being overlooked, overworked, or underpaid
- Past losses that convinced you not to expect more

Eventually, you internalized the belief:

“I’ll always be close—but not chosen.”

But that’s not your truth.

It’s a lie rooted in pain—and it can be uprooted today.

Rewriting Your Internal Story

Here’s what you must know:

1. You are not what happened to you.

Your story of rejection is real—but it is not your identity.

2. You are not defined by the opportunities you missed.

God is the restorer of time, and He can give you double.

3. Your worth is not tied to performance.

You are enough—even when you’re still becoming.

4. You were never meant to “almost” succeed.

You were made to complete, to conquer, and to thrive.

5. The season of proving is over.

Now begins the season of believing.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

When you rewrite your inner script, your outer life begins to change.

Signs You’ve Been Living with an “Almost” Identity

- You downplay your accomplishments
- You fear success more than failure
- You say things like, “I’m just trying to make it” instead of “I’m walking in purpose”
- You hesitate to ask for what you truly want
- You believe favor is for others, not you
- You stop dreaming because it feels unrealistic

These are not just symptoms of self-doubt—they are symptoms of an identity that’s been distorted by disappointment.

But the healer is here.

And the lie is being dismantled.

Journal Prompts

- What moments in my past made me feel like I wasn’t enough?
- When have I settled for less, not because it’s what I wanted, but because it felt safer?
- What do I believe about people who succeed? Do I believe I’m one of them?
- What words or labels have I accepted that limited me?
- How would I live, love, or build differently if I knew I was already enough?

Action Step

Write a new identity statement.

Start with:

“I am no longer the version of myself that...”

Then finish the sentence with truths like:

- “...waits to be chosen.”
- “...believes struggle is my identity.”
- “...settles to avoid disappointment.”

Then declare:

“From today forward, I walk as the finisher I was born to be.”

Say it daily until your mind believes what your spirit already knows.

Affirmation

I am not “almost” anything—I am enough.

I break the lie of inadequacy and low expectation.

I was made to finish. I was made to shine.

The fear of being too much or not enough is broken.

I walk boldly into everything I was born to become.

Testimonies

Marco, Cameroon

“I was always the guy who helped others succeed, but never crossed my own finish line. I used to say, ‘I’m just the background guy.’ After going through the identity section of Bishop Climate’s online mentorship, I realized I had adopted the role of ‘almost’ my whole life. Through prayer, journaling, and declarations, I rewrote my internal story. That year, I launched my own business—and saw it thrive. I’m no longer background. I’m walking boldly.”

Khadra, Denmark

“As a first-generation immigrant, I always felt like I had to prove myself. Every achievement felt like it still wasn’t good enough. I lived in fear of failure and success. Through Bishop Climate’s deliverance coaching, I confronted childhood wounds and broke internal vows of inadequacy. I wrote a new identity statement, started therapy, and now walk confidently into boardrooms where I used to feel invisible. I am enough—and I know it.”

Real-Life Application

You don’t need to become someone new.

You need to remember who you were before fear redefined you.

The curse of “almost enough” is rooted in pain—but it cannot survive the truth of who God says you are.

Today, you rewrite your identity.

Not with fake confidence, but with holy clarity.

You were never made to shrink.

You were born to stand up and finish well.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“For you are God’s masterpiece, created in Christ Jesus for good works...” – Ephesians 2:10 (NLT)

Prayer Focus:

Father, uproot every lie I have believed about my worth.

I repent for adopting an identity of “almost enough.”

Restore the boldness, confidence, and clarity that was stolen through shame and rejection.

Let the truth of who I am drown out the echoes of failure.

I receive my identity as complete, called, and more than enough.

In Jesus’ name, amen.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I break every identity of “almost enough” in my life.
2. I am complete, equipped, and ready to finish.
3. I no longer shrink to fit into old expectations.
4. I walk in boldness, not fear.
5. I deserve success because I am called to it.
6. I will no longer be the helper who never helps themselves.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

7. I break every inner vow of failure, smallness, and invisibility.
8. My mind is renewed with the truth of who I am.
9. I am not second-best. I am chosen and called.
10. I dream, speak, and build like the finisher I am.
11. I expect favor, success, and open doors.
12. I will never again wear the label of “almost”—I wear victory.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, heal the wounds of rejection that shaped my self-perception.
2. Break the spirit of shame, low expectation, and false humility.
3. Uproot every lie that told me I wasn't good enough.
4. Deliver me from the fear of success and the fear of failure.
5. Release divine confidence over my voice, gifts, and identity.
6. Reverse every word curse spoken over my worth.
7. Restore my ability to dream and plan big.
8. Strengthen my inner man to believe in completion.
9. Break generational patterns of small thinking.
10. Anoint my mind for clarity, boldness, and expansion.
11. Align me with people who reflect and support my true identity.
12. Let this be the season where I fully step into my name, my lane, and my finish.

Final Thought

You were never meant to live as “almost enough.”

You were not created to live in the shadow of other people’s greatness.

You were designed to finish, to shine, and to walk in power.

The curse of near-success loses its grip when you realize—you were always enough.

No more shrinking. No more self-rejection.

This is the day you show up as who you were always meant to be.

You’re not almost. You’re ready. Now finish strong.

Day 16

Rewire Your Confidence and Self-Expectation

For years, you may have been conditioned to brace for disappointment.

You begin things with enthusiasm, but somewhere deep inside, you're waiting for it to fall apart.

You smile outwardly, but your mind is rehearsing every possible failure.

This is not just fear. It's a pattern of expectation rooted in past experience.

And if you don't challenge it, you'll unconsciously sabotage progress before it begins.

What's needed now isn't just a new opportunity.

You need a rewired belief system—one that's trained to expect victory, prepare for completion, and believe for the best.

Because until your mind is renewed, your reality will keep mirroring your past disappointments.

How the Mind Forms a Failure Loop

Every time something fails or falls through, your brain records it as a reference point.

If it happens often enough, your internal narrative becomes:

- “This won’t work.”
- “I’ll probably get disappointed again.”
- “Why get excited when it always ends the same?”
- “I’m not the kind of person who finishes.”

These silent beliefs become your emotional autopilot.

And even when something good shows up, your nervous system prepares for collapse.

This is why people quit when things are going well—they don’t know how to expect completion.

You don’t just need faith. You need retraining.

What Is Finish Line Focus?

Finish Line Focus is a mindset rooted in completion.

It says:

- “I don’t just start—I finish.”
- “What I build will last.”
- “I expect open doors to stay open.”
- “I’m wired for breakthrough—not burnout.”

It doesn’t mean you’ll never face resistance.

It means your default belief becomes:

“This is going to work.”

“I’m built for this.”

“I will cross the line.”

You must train your mind to expect what God promised—not what the past repeated.

How to Rewire Your Confidence

1. Identify Your Core Fear

Is it fear of failure? Success? Abandonment after breakthrough?

Be honest. What do you really expect deep down?

2. Replace Inner Critic With Inner Champion

Every time your mind says, “You won’t make it,” respond:

“I’ve been equipped to finish. I’m not that version of me anymore.”

3. Train Your Emotions Daily

Set your mind before it sets your day.

Speak declarations in the morning. Visualize finishing with joy.

Feel it before you see it.

4. Celebrate Small Completions

Every time you finish a task, project, or conversation, acknowledge it.

You are proving to your subconscious that you can complete things.

5. Prepare for Success, Not Sabotage

Shift from bracing for disappointment to making room for results.

Expect divine partnerships, lasting favor, and supernatural strength.

Journal Prompts

- What have I unconsciously trained myself to expect?
- Do I believe things will work out—or fall apart?
- What are three moments I finished something that I was proud of?
- What daily thoughts are reinforcing old patterns?
- How would I act if I knew I was built to win?

Action Step

Write down your three most consistent negative beliefs around progress or completion.

Then next to each one, write a new expectation.

Example:

Old belief: “Something always goes wrong.”

New declaration: “Things align for me, and I complete what I start.”

Repeat your new declarations for the next 7 days—out loud—every morning and every night.

Affirmation

I rewire my mind for victory.

I break the cycle of doubt, fear, and failure.

I am not who I used to be—I am a finisher.

My thoughts align with truth. My expectations are elevated.

I prepare for the finish line—not the fallout.

Testimonies

Daniel, Hungary

“My father always said, ‘Don’t expect too much or you’ll be disappointed.’ That voice lived in me for years. I’d get close to success and then panic or pull back. After a teaching from Bishop Climate on rewiring faith and expectation, I began daily declarations. I visualized my goals completed. Within six months, I closed my first major deal and finished writing a book I’d delayed for 8 years. My mind changed—then my life followed.”

Rosa, Greece

“I used to sabotage anything good. I would find reasons to delay or disqualify myself. I realized I was addicted to struggle. Bishop Climate’s 30-day deliverance series helped me see that my expectations were shaped by trauma. Through prayer, declarations, and counseling, I’ve retrained my thoughts. I now believe I deserve completion. And things are finally sticking.”

Real-Life Application

Confidence isn't arrogance. It's alignment.

It's saying: I agree with what God has put in me.

The world will give you 1,000 reasons to expect failure.

But God gives you one reason to believe again: You are His.

And He finishes what He starts.

If He put the dream in you, He will empower you to finish it.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

"Being confident of this very thing, that He who has begun a good work in you will complete it..." – Philippians 1:6 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, renew my mind.

Break the grip of past disappointments, fear, and false expectations.

Help me to think, speak, and believe like the finisher You created me to be.

Rewire my confidence. Reframe my perspective.

Let my thoughts match Your promises.

I declare my breakthrough is not just coming—it's being completed.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I am confident in what God has placed in me.
2. My mind is set on finishing—not failure.
3. I expect good things to last.
4. I no longer rehearse disappointment—I rehearse destiny.
5. I complete what I start.
6. I walk with a finisher’s focus and boldness.
7. My thoughts align with my calling.
8. I break every internal agreement with failure.
9. I prepare for success and expect favor.
10. I walk in the mind of Christ—renewed and unstoppable.
11. Doubt has no place in my imagination.
12. My life is wired for victory, not defeat.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, uproot every failure-based belief system in my life.
2. Break the stronghold of disappointment and delay in my thoughts.
3. Heal the emotions that taught me to expect loss.
4. Rewire my imagination with the picture of success and joy.
5. I bind every voice of internal sabotage and defeat.
6. Release supernatural confidence and boldness over me now.
7. Let divine clarity flood my mind and drive out confusion.

8. Teach me to celebrate completion, not just start with hope.
9. Replace the fear of success with faith for fulfillment.
10. Surround me with voices that reinforce my finisher identity.
11. Let every mental stronghold be torn down in Jesus' name.
12. I declare total mental freedom, renewal, and alignment with the finish line.

Final Thought

You've waited long enough.

You've doubted long enough.

Now is the time to rise—with confidence that's trained, tested, and transformed.

You're not wired for failure.

You're built to finish.

Let your thoughts catch up with your calling.

Because when your mind aligns with your destiny—nothing can stop you.

Day 17

The Power of Finisher's Vision

Before anything is finished in your hands, it must first be finished in your mind.

Every great accomplishment begins with a clear internal picture—a mental image of what success looks like.

But when you've experienced cycles of delay, loss, and disappointment, your vision can get distorted.

Instead of seeing the finish line, you start seeing fear.

Instead of imagining victory, you imagine collapse.

Instead of visualizing the blessing, you anticipate the battle.

This is why vision is not optional—it is essential.

Without clear vision, you will start strong but wander aimlessly.

Without vision, you'll get distracted, discouraged, and tempted to quit.

To break the curse of “almost there,” you need to activate Finisher’s Vision—the ability to see it done before it’s done, and to stay locked in until the picture in your heart becomes your reality.

What Is Finisher’s Vision?

Finisher’s Vision is more than motivation.

It’s a prophetic focus that allows you to:

- Lock in on the future God has shown you
- Tune out distractions and discouragement
- Endure process because you’re committed to the picture
- Speak from faith, not fear
- Align your daily actions with your divine destination

This kind of vision sees beyond circumstances.

It is rooted in divine clarity and anchored in belief:

“This will be finished because God is with me.”

Why Most People Lose Vision

1. They’ve seen too much failure – and it distorted their imagination.
2. They were never taught to visualize with faith – only with fear or anxiety.
3. They don’t believe they’re worthy of the future they desire.

4. They only trust what they see now, not what God said.

When your internal vision is blurred, you won't pursue what's possible.

You'll stay stuck in what's familiar—even if it's painful.

The enemy's goal is to damage your inner picture so badly that you never even try again.

But today, you take back your vision.

How to Build a Finisher's Vision

1. See It Completed—Not in Progress

Don't just see yourself starting the business, degree, or book.

See yourself celebrating its success. Signing the deal. Holding the finished product.

2. Speak the Outcome—Not the Obstacle

Train your language to match your vision:

“I'm so glad I completed this” instead of “I hope I can finish.”

3. Protect Your Imagination from Contamination

Limit exposure to voices, images, or conversations that stir fear, doubt, or confusion.

4. Revisit Your Why

Remind yourself why you must finish—who's waiting on your obedience, who will be transformed by your testimony.

5. Create Visual Anchors

Post your goals where you can see them. Use journals, mood boards, photos, or sticky notes to keep your vision front and center.

Journal Prompts

- What does my completed vision look like in vivid detail?
- Where have I lost clarity about what I'm building or becoming?
- What distractions or discouragements have blurred my vision?
- What does the finisher version of me look, feel, and speak like?
- What must I do this week to protect and sharpen my inner picture?

Action Step

Spend 10 uninterrupted minutes today visualizing your completion.

Close your eyes and see it:

- The celebration.
- The fruit.
- The freedom.
- The final product.

Then write a short script in the present tense that begins with:

“I am so grateful that I finished...”

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Read this aloud every day for the next 7 days—before you check your phone, scroll, or start your to-do list.

Affirmation

I see it finished.

I speak from victory, not from fear.

My future is clear, focused, and already in motion.

Distractions cannot delay me.

I have Finisher’s Vision—and I will not stop until I see it complete.

Testimonies

Caleb, Norway

“For years, I started things but never followed through. I didn’t realize it was because I couldn’t see myself finishing. Bishop Climate’s teachings on Finisher’s Vision helped me build a mental picture of success. I started visualizing my business thriving and even recorded voice notes of my goals. Now, I’ve launched three streams of income and finally feel like a finisher. It started in my mind.”

Liliana, Italy

“I used to dream small because I was afraid of disappointment. Vision boards felt like fantasy to me. But during a prophetic Zoom session with Bishop Climate Ministries, I saw myself preaching, writing, and finishing school. That mental image became my daily meditation. Within a year, all three came to pass. Now I help other women build faith-based vision plans. Seeing it finished changed everything.”

Real-Life Application

God won’t force you to finish something you don’t believe in.
That’s why He gives you glimpses—so you’ll grab hold of them.
Your job is to feed that glimpse.
Nurture it. Speak it. Visualize it. Build it—until it becomes your norm.
This is not just about dreaming.
This is about finishing what God started in you—with unwavering focus.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Write the vision and make it plain... though it tarries, wait for it; it will surely come.” – Habakkuk 2:2–3 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, sharpen my vision.
Help me to see my future with divine clarity.
Deliver me from fear, doubt, and distractions.
Renew my imagination to expect completion.
Let me be so focused on what You’ve shown me that no attack can move me.

I decree: I have Finisher’s Vision—and I will cross the line.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I see my future with divine clarity.
2. I break every fog of fear and distraction.
3. My mind is focused and my heart is anchored.
4. I protect my vision with discipline and faith.
5. I speak like a finisher, plan like a builder, and move like a winner.
6. My vision is unstoppable because God is in it.
7. I align my habits with my vision daily.
8. I see completion and declare it done.
9. The picture in my heart is becoming the reality in my hands.
10. I will not stop, slow down, or give up.
11. I am the finisher in my family and in my generation.
12. I carry Finisher’s Vision, and I walk in full completion.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, restore and sharpen my inner vision.
2. Break every demonic veil that distorts my future.
3. Deliver me from the fear of dreaming big again.
4. Anoint my eyes to see from a place of victory.
5. Let every part of me align with the picture You’ve given me.
6. Remove every relationship that clouds my focus.
7. Release supernatural strategy to match my vision.
8. Let my thoughts and words reflect divine expectation.

9. Reignite passion for the dreams I once buried.
10. Teach me to guard my vision like a sacred promise.
11. Open doors that bring my vision into manifestation.
12. Seal my journey with grace, clarity, and power to finish strong.

Final Thought

You won't finish what you can't see.

And you won't pursue what you don't believe is possible.

But today, your vision is being restored.

Your confidence is being rebuilt.

And your finish line is in focus.

Don't let go until it becomes real.

Keep seeing it. Keep building it.

Because this time—you will finish.

Day 18

Turn Pressure into Prophetic Fuel

Pressure is a part of progress.

Deadlines, demands, critics, expectations, internal battles—they all show up when you're close to completion.

But pressure is not your enemy.

It's your signal that something powerful is about to be birthed.

The problem isn't pressure—it's how you respond to it.

Most people either:

- Crumble under it
- Procrastinate around it
- Escape from it
- Or freeze in fear

But those who finish well learn how to transform pressure into prophetic fuel.

They convert stress into strategy.

They let urgency sharpen their focus instead of break their spirit.

They take the heat—and turn it into fire.

If you want to break the curse of “almost there,” you must learn how to handle pressure as a divine cue, not a demonic trap.

The Truth About Pressure

Pressure is not a curse.

It's a byproduct of calling.

The greater the assignment, the more weight you will carry.

That's why people with small dreams don't feel what you feel.

But you weren't born for small.

When pressure shows up, it's because:

- Your breakthrough is near
- Your capacity is being stretched
- Your character is being refined
- Your finishing grace is being activated

You don't need to avoid pressure.

You need to transform how you carry it.

Why Stress Tries to Sabotage You

Stress becomes toxic when:

- You internalize the pressure instead of praying through it
- You try to do everything alone
- You let deadlines become doom instead of direction
- You associate pressure with failure instead of birth

But here's the truth:

Pressure doesn't mean something is wrong.

It often means something is working—and it needs your courage to push it through.

Instead of saying, “I can't handle this,” start saying, “This pressure means I'm closer than I think.”

How to Turn Pressure Into Prophetic Fuel

1. Recognize Pressure as a Prophetic Sign

Pressure is proof you're carrying something of value. It's your labor pains—don't curse them.

2. Speak Victory Under Pressure

Don't let stress shape your speech. Declare: “I'm built for this. I have finishing grace. This will not break me—it will birth something in me.”

3. Breathe, Then Break It Down

Take 10 minutes to pause. Breathe deeply. Break the pressure into tasks. Clarity kills overwhelm.

4. Invite God Into the Deadline

Ask Him for supernatural acceleration, divine wisdom, and clarity. You're not supposed to do this alone.

5. Let Pressure Refine, Not Define

Don't let how you feel in the moment define who you are. Let it reveal what's being upgraded in you.

Journal Prompts

- When have I let pressure derail my progress?
- How do I usually respond to deadlines or high demand?
- What patterns of sabotage show up when I'm stressed?
- What does it look like to turn pressure into prophetic momentum in my life?
- What pressure am I facing right now that could actually be a breakthrough signal?

Action Step

Make a "Pressure Power Plan."

Pick one area of your life where you feel the most pressure (career, finances, project, relationship, etc.).

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

List out:

- The source of the pressure
- What it’s trying to teach or show you
- One action you can take today to move forward

Then declare:

“This pressure will not break me—it will birth something better.”

Affirmation

Pressure is not my enemy—it’s my fuel.

I do not collapse—I complete.

I have grace to handle deadlines, critics, and expectations.

God is my strength, and I will not sabotage myself.

This pressure is birthing something powerful—and I will finish strong.

Testimonies

Szymon, Ireland

“I used to shut down when deadlines approached. I’d panic, procrastinate, or overthink. Bishop Climate’s message on prophetic pressure opened my eyes—I was misinterpreting divine urgency as emotional chaos. I began declaring victory under pressure, praying over deadlines, and breaking my workload into manageable parts. I finished a delayed degree, secured a job, and now coach others who struggle under pressure. The curse of panic was broken when I embraced the pressure as purpose.”

Helena, Canada

“I was about to quit my business. I felt overwhelmed, behind, and ashamed. Every launch ended in stress. During a prayer call with Bishop Climate Ministries, I learned how pressure activates finishing grace. I repented for partnering with fear, took a break to regroup, and then relaunched with fresh vision. This time, I doubled my revenue. Pressure didn’t destroy me—it birthed my breakthrough.”

Real-Life Application

Every finisher will feel pressure—but not every person will interpret it correctly.

Some see pressure and retreat.

Others see pressure and rise.

You don’t need to fear pressure.

You need to reframe it.

Pressure is the environment where diamonds are made.

Where legacies are birthed.

Where finishers are forged.

Today, you’re not escaping pressure—you’re transforming it into firepower.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Consider it pure joy, my brothers and sisters, whenever you face trials... because the testing of your faith produces perseverance.”

—James 1:2–3 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Lord, teach me how to carry pressure with grace.

Help me recognize when I’m under divine urgency and not demonic stress.

Break every cycle of panic, procrastination, and sabotage.

Infuse me with focus, strength, and prophetic perspective.

Turn this pressure into power—and let me finish what I started.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I turn pressure into prophetic momentum.

You were meant to stand in it, rise through it, and finish beyond it.

This is your moment.

The pressure isn't here to crush you.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

It's here to prove what's in you.

You are not a victim of stress.

You are a carrier of power.

Breathe deep. Lock in. Push through.

And watch what births out of this pressure.

Day 19

Train Your Mind to Expect Completion

You don't rise to the level of your desires—you rise to the level of your discipline.

Wanting to finish is not the same as being mentally trained to finish.

Many people start strong with passion, excitement, and big dreams...

But when pressure hits, time drags, or motivation fades, they drift into spiritual procrastination.

They delay.

They second-guess.

They over-plan and under-perform.

Not because they're lazy—but because their mind is not trained to finish.

If you've struggled to follow through, this chapter is not about shame.

It’s about rewiring your thoughts, emotions, and habits so that completion becomes your new normal.

The Psychology of Completion

Finishing is not a gift—it’s a habit.

And habits are built by:

- Repetition
- Intention
- Internal beliefs
- Emotional conditioning

Your brain is designed to follow the strongest pattern, not necessarily the best one.

So if your strongest pattern is almost, your brain will keep leading you there—even when you want more.

But with intention and spiritual discipline, you can retrain your thoughts and establish a mindset of momentum.

Signs of a Mind Untrained to Finish

- You get excited at the start, but bored in the middle
- You delay hard or unfamiliar tasks
- You start multiple projects but rarely complete them
- You feel guilty when you’re productive—as if you’re betraying rest or relationships
- You keep “waiting for the right time” that never comes
- You find comfort in preparing more than executing

This is not just procrastination—it’s spiritual resistance disguised as delay.

The good news? You can break the cycle and train your mind to align with victory.

Mental Exercises to Build Finishing Discipline

1. Rehearse the Finish Daily

Close your eyes and picture the job done. See the results. Feel the relief. Let your emotions taste completion—before it happens.

2. Break Big Goals Into Micro-Wins

Your brain rewards completion. So divide every task into small wins that can be checked off quickly.

3. Create a “Done List,” Not Just a To-Do List

Every time you finish something—no matter how small—write it down and celebrate. It reinforces the finisher identity.

4. Block Time, Not Just Goals

Set a timer for focused work (e.g., 25 minutes). Don’t break concentration. This builds endurance and trains your brain to push through resistance.

5. Use Declaration Anchors

When tempted to stop, say: “I don’t stop at almost. I finish.”
Say it until your emotions submit to your focus.

Breaking Spiritual Procrastination

Procrastination isn't always laziness—it can be:

- Fear of failure
- Fear of success
- Avoidance of responsibility
- Guilt over doing better than others
- Demonic distraction or confusion
- Inner vows like “I never finish anything”

To break it, you must repent for delaying divine instruction and command your spirit, soul, and body to align with God's timing.

Delayed obedience is disobedience.

Today, that delay ends.

Journal Prompts

- What is my usual pattern when I start something new?
- What beliefs do I carry about finishing—or failing?
- Where does my procrastination come from: fear, doubt, or trauma?
- How would I act if I were already trained to finish?
- What systems or habits can I create to reinforce my finisher identity?

Action Step

Choose one unfinished task or dream you've been delaying.

Break it into three small steps—and complete the first one today.

Then write this declaration three times:

“I am no longer ruled by delay. I am built to finish.”

Bonus: Share your completed step with someone you trust.
Accountability strengthens discipline.

Affirmation

I am not a prisoner of procrastination.

I break delay in my thoughts, actions, and patterns.

My mind is trained to finish.

My habits align with completion.

What I start—I finish.

What I dream—I build.

And I will not stop until I see results.

Testimonies

Ali, United Kingdom

“I used to be the king of starting things and abandoning them halfway. I thought I had a motivation issue—but through

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Bishop Climate’s mentorship program, I realized I had a mental habit of delay and fear of completion. I repented, rewired my planning system, and started using declarations. For the first time in 10 years, I finished my degree and opened a consultancy firm. I finally feel like a finisher—and my mindset is unshakable.”

Ella, Mexico

“Procrastination made me miss deadlines, cancel plans, and delay healing. I felt ashamed but stuck. Bishop Climate’s teachings exposed the spiritual roots—shame, trauma, and fear of not being good enough. I started retraining my thoughts using short declarations and scheduled action bursts. Within 3 months, I published my first blog series and started therapy. My pace is different now. I don’t delay—I do.”

Real-Life Application

You don’t need another idea—you need a finisher’s mentality.

One that keeps showing up, even when it’s not glamorous or easy.

One that doesn’t confuse perfection with progress.

One that rewires your emotions to expect victory, not just hope for it.

This is not about hustling harder.

It’s about moving with divine focus until the work is done.

You are not “almost there” anymore.

You are on a collision course with completion.

Final Thought

Finishing is not a feeling—it's a decision.

You don't wait for inspiration.

Dr Climate Wiseman

You train your mind.

You discipline your body.

You build spiritual habits that cannot be broken.

And when you do...

You finish. Every time.

The days of delay are over.

The pattern of almost is broken.

You are no longer circling.

You are crossing over.

Now finish. Boldly. Consistently. Completely.

Day 20

Silencing the Voice of Past Losses

There's a voice that whispers when you're about to rise.

It reminds you of everything that didn't work.

Every failed attempt.

Every relationship that collapsed.

Every dream that didn't survive.

And it dares to ask:

“What if it happens again?”

That voice is not the voice of God.

It's the haunting echo of past losses trying to define your future potential.

If not silenced, it becomes louder than your faith, heavier than your hope, and stronger than your motivation.

To truly break the “almost there” curse, you must not only move forward—you must silence the voice of where you've been.

Because no matter how hard you work, if you carry the soundtrack of past failure, you'll sabotage future success.

The Lingering Power of Past Failure

Failures that aren't healed become internal narratives.

And narratives shape:

- Your confidence
- Your decisions
- Your expectations
- Your relationships
- Your endurance

It's not just that you failed—it's what that failure told you about yourself:

- "I'm not meant to finish."
- "Things never work out for me."
- "I must not be called after all."

This voice becomes a stronghold in your soul—a mental and emotional gatekeeper that filters every new opportunity through the lens of the last collapse.

But God is calling you to close the chapter.

You are not your last mistake.

You are not the loss you endured.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

You are not the version of yourself who gave up before.

You are being restored, rebuilt, and re-fired.

Signs You're Still Listening to Past Losses

- You're constantly second-guessing decisions
- You reject compliments or success out of fear it won't last
- You feel emotionally numb when opportunity shows up
- You relive old failures in moments of stress
- You downplay your gifts because of past criticism
- You expect abandonment, loss, or betrayal even in healthy situations

These are not just personality quirks. They are echoes of old battles still speaking in new seasons.

But you don't have to listen anymore.

How to Silence the Voice of Past Losses

1. Grieve What You Lost—Then Close It

You're allowed to mourn. But you're not allowed to live in the graveyard of yesterday.

2. Declare an End Date

Say out loud: “This is the last day I carry the weight of [name the failure].”

Your soul needs to hear your spirit take authority.

3. Reclaim the Voice You Gave Away

Every time you quit, you gave your voice to shame, fear, or discouragement. Today, take it back.

Say: “I have a right to speak, lead, finish, and win.”

4. Rewrite the Meaning of the Loss

Instead of: “That broke me,” say: “That trained me.”

Instead of: “That was the end,” say: “That was the preparation.”

5. Let God Heal the Story

Invite Him into the moment of loss—not to erase it, but to redeem it.

Journal Prompts

- What loss in my life still affects how I approach new opportunities?
- What internal voice do I hear when I’m about to finish something?
- What false identity have I carried because of failure?
- What would it sound like to believe again?
- If I fully forgave myself, how would I act today?

Action Step

Write a letter to your past self at the point of your greatest loss.

Encourage them. Forgive them. Speak life to them.

Then declare this aloud:

“I release myself from every version of failure I’ve lived through. I reclaim my faith, my fire, and my future. The past no longer has a voice in my victory.”

Tear up the letter and throw it away—or burn it as a prophetic act of closure.

Affirmation

I silence the voice of past losses.

I am not what I lost—I am who God says I am.

My identity is not in failure.

My voice is strong. My faith is restored. My fire is rising.

I move forward without guilt, fear, or apology.

This is my comeback season—and I will finish.

Testimonies

David, Mexico

“I lost my business five years ago. Every time I tried to start again, I froze. I stopped believing in myself. During Bishop Climate’s online deliverance series, I realized the real bondage wasn’t the failure—it was the voice that came with it. I repented, renounced the shame, and spoke life over my next attempt. This year, I relaunched and exceeded my old profits in 90 days. I now teach others to finish—because I silenced the voice of loss.”

Boitumelo, Tanzania

“After three failed relationships, I believed I was cursed to be alone. I stopped praying for marriage. I even sabotaged a great man who wanted to pursue me. Bishop Climate’s book revealed I was still in agreement with old heartbreak. Through prayer and prophetic declarations, I healed, forgave myself, and began again. I’m now happily married and helping women overcome soul wounds. The voice of failure is gone—and my voice has returned.”

Real-Life Application

You can’t walk in full power with a half-healed soul.

You can’t speak from fire while still echoing fear.

You must silence the old soundtrack so a new story can begin.

You don’t need to erase your past—just refuse to let it define your next move.

God is writing a new chapter, but He won’t fight your past voice for the pen.

Give it back. Let Him write your victory.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Forget the former things; do not dwell on the past. See, I am doing a new thing...” – Isaiah 43:18–19 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, I surrender every echo of failure that still lives in my heart.

I forgive myself. I forgive those who wounded me.

I silence the inner critic, the shame, and the fear that came from my losses.

Restore my voice. Reignite my fire.

Let my spirit rise with fresh faith and a new sound.

I declare: my past is closed—and my future is open.

5. My mind is renewed with divine confidence.

11. I finish with joy, not fear.
12. This is my time, and I will not be silenced.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, heal every part of me still bound to past failure.
2. Break the spiritual agreement with loss and regret.
3. Deliver me from fear that comes from previous disappointment.
4. Silence every internal voice that contradicts Your promise.
5. Restore my passion, creativity, and purpose.
6. I bind every lying spirit that speaks defeat in my moments of progress.
7. Anoint my voice with boldness and clarity.
8. Set me free from the fear of repeating past mistakes.
9. Let new opportunities be met with new strength.
10. Cover every past loss with redemptive glory.
11. Release divine confidence over every unfinished area of my life.
12. I declare a prophetic shift into full victory and lasting completion.

Final Thought

You are not what didn't work.

You are not what left.

You are not what broke.

You are what remains—and what God is now restoring.

Your voice matters. Your fire still burns.

And your finish will be greater than the failure you survived.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Silence the past—and rise.

The future is waiting.

Day 21

Declare Your Breakthrough in Advance

Before God ever created light, He spoke it.

Before Jesus healed the sick, He commanded it.

Before walls fell in Jericho, the people had to shout.

Why? Because nothing manifests until it is declared.

In the realm of the spirit, your voice is not just expression—it's a creative weapon.

It announces what's coming before it arrives.

It builds what you can't yet see.

It establishes what your feet have not yet touched.

If you want to break the curse of “almost there,” you must stop waiting to see victory before you speak it.

Instead, you must declare the finish in advance.

Why Your Voice Is Vital

Your words don't just reflect your faith—they reveal and reinforce it.

Every time you speak:

- You shape your expectations
- You shift your atmosphere
- You activate angels
- You align your thoughts
- You cancel demonic agreements

Remaining silent in battle is a form of surrender.

But declaring victory before you see it? That's how you take territory in the spirit.

If your mind is trained to finish, your mouth must announce the finish.

The Danger of Passive Speech

We often think being quiet is being “wise” or “humble.”

But many times, silence is fear in disguise.

You say:

- “I hope it works out.”
- “I’m trying my best.”
- “Let’s see what happens.”

These passive phrases are open doors to doubt.

They give room for delay, confusion, and demonic interference.

Your speech must shift from neutral to prophetic:

- “It is already done.”
- “I will finish this and finish well.”
- “This project will prosper.”
- “Nothing can stop my completion.”

What you don’t declare, you allow the enemy to define.

How to Declare the End Before You See It

1. Write the Vision as if It’s Already Done

Don’t say, “I want to start my business.”

Say, “Thank You, Lord, for my successful, thriving business.”

2. Speak Aloud Every Morning and Night

Use your voice to establish the day before your feet hit the floor.

3. Turn Your Doubts into Declarations

Every time fear says, “You can’t,” respond: “I already did, in the spirit.”

4. Saturate Your Environment With Prophetic Language

Put scriptures, declarations, and finish-line phrases around your home, phone, and work area.

5. Speak Even When You’re Shaking

Power is not in your volume—it’s in your consistency. Declare until doubt backs down.

Journal Prompts

- What have I been waiting to say out loud because I’m afraid it won’t happen?
- What have I been speaking that may be reinforcing delay?
- What does it sound like when I talk as a finisher?
- How can I use my voice more boldly to align with my vision?
- What declarations do I need to make daily to stay in victory mode?

Action Step

Write three future finish lines you want to cross (example: complete your book, graduate, launch your ministry, get married, etc.).

Next to each one, write a declaration as if it has already happened.

Example:

“I give God the glory for completing my first book, which is changing lives and opening doors across the world.”

Speak these declarations every morning for the next 7 days—and watch your atmosphere shift.

Affirmation

I declare my breakthrough in advance.

Dr Climate Wiseman

My voice carries power, authority, and divine alignment.

I do not wait to see it before I believe it—I speak it until I see it.

Delay has no access to my destiny.

I finish strong, and my words pave the way.

Testimonies

Leo, New Zealand

“For years I waited until I saw results before I celebrated. But I learned from Bishop Climate that victory begins with your voice. I began prophesying over myself daily. I’d say, ‘My business is booming,’ even when I had no clients. Within two months, I had three large contracts. Speaking it in advance gave my faith a structure to move in. Now I declare daily—and I finish what I start.”

Grace, Romania

“I was always afraid to speak too confidently because I thought it was pride. But I realized I was giving fear more authority than faith. Through the 30-day course, I began declaring bold affirmations over my education, my marriage, and my ministry. Now I’m walking in all three. The shift didn’t start with a miracle—it started with my mouth.”

Real-Life Application

The devil doesn’t mind if you dream—as long as you stay silent.

But the moment you speak, you activate your authority.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Your declarations don't just predict your future—they help create it.

Speak like a finisher.

Declare like a builder.

Prophesy like it's already done.

Because in heaven—it is.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“You will also declare a thing, and it will be established for you...” – Job 22:28 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, forgive me for speaking doubt, fear, and delay over my destiny.

Anoint my tongue to speak life, victory, and breakthrough.

Teach me to declare Your promises with boldness.

Let my words align with my calling.

Every time I open my mouth, let heaven respond and the earth yield fruit.

I declare I will finish—and I say it in advance.

10. My declarations break spiritual resistance.
11. I speak boldly because I trust God completely.
12. I declare: This is my season to finish strong.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, anoint my voice to shape destiny.
2. Break the habit of passive or fearful language in me.
3. Let every word of my mouth align with truth and power.
4. I cancel every negative word I've spoken over myself.
5. Anoint my declarations to activate supernatural results.
6. Teach me to declare from faith, not frustration.
7. Let my voice carry authority and fire in the spirit.
8. Uproot every internal agreement with delay.
9. Let my home, atmosphere, and relationships reflect my prophetic words.
10. Let angels respond swiftly to my declarations.
11. Restore my courage to speak boldly—even in battle.
12. I declare breakthrough, completion, and legacy over my life.

Final Thought

Your future listens to your voice.

Your next level is waiting for you to speak it forward.

No more fear. No more silence.

You are not hoping anymore—you are declaring.

And because you declare it, you will see it.

Speak it. Believe it. Walk in it.

Because finishers speak first.

Day 22

Heaven Backs Finishers: Angelic Help to Complete

There is something powerful that happens when you determine in your heart:

“I will finish.”

Heaven doesn't just applaud your decision—it backs it.

The moment you step into alignment with your divine assignment, angelic reinforcements are dispatched.

You're not just pushing through in your strength—you are surrounded by divine help.

Finishing is not a lonely journey.

It may feel like you're doing it alone, but in the spirit realm, an army has been activated.

The truth is this:

Heaven backs finishers.

And one of the most overlooked weapons God gives to help you finish are angels assigned to your destiny.

What Are Finishers' Angels?

These are messengers, warriors, and helpers from heaven assigned to:

- Guard your path from demonic interruption
- Strengthen you in moments of weariness
- War on your behalf when resistance intensifies
- Carry divine instructions, solutions, and provision
- Accelerate the timeline of your breakthrough

They are not just protectors—they are project finishers in the spirit.

When you commit to the finish line, they go ahead of you to clear the way.

Why Angelic Help Shows Up at the Finish Line

Think of it this way:

- Jesus was strengthened by an angel in Gethsemane before the cross.
- Daniel was helped by an angel when his prayers were delayed.
- Elisha saw the hills filled with angelic armies when he was under threat.

The closer you get to breakthrough, the more resistance you feel—because the enemy knows help is on the way.

But just as demonic resistance increases, so does angelic assistance.

God doesn't let finishers fight alone.

He sends help to those who choose not to quit.

What Angelic Intervention Looks Like

- Supernatural acceleration (what would take months, happens in days)
- Sudden open doors or divine connections
- Unexplainable peace in stressful moments
- Insight, clarity, and divine strategy
- Protection from sabotage or premature exposure
- Prophetic instructions in dreams or impressions
- Unusual strength to complete what once felt overwhelming

This is not hype. It's biblical reality.

You're not abandoned—you're reinforced.

How to Activate Angelic Help to Finish

1. Commit Your Assignment to God

Angels respond to assignments from heaven, not confusion. Be clear: "Lord, I choose to finish what You've entrusted me with."

2. Speak the Language of Victory

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Angels move at the sound of faith. Complaining slows momentum. Speaking completion accelerates assistance.

3. Ask for Divine Reinforcements

You have not because you ask not. Declare: “Father, release angels to help me finish strong.”

4. Stay in Alignment

Angels work in divine order. Stay obedient, clean in spirit, and sensitive to spiritual direction.

5. Thank God for Their Help

Gratitude increases angelic activity. Praise opens portals for divine movement.

Journal Prompts

- Where have I tried to finish in my own strength?
- What moments in my life felt like divine help showed up unexpectedly?
- Do I believe I have spiritual support to finish?
- How would I act if I knew angels were fighting for me?
- What assignment do I need to invite heavenly help into right now?

Action Step

Write a personal declaration today inviting angelic help into your specific situation.

Example:

“Father, I thank You that I am not alone. I invite Your angelic host to support, protect, and push me to completion. I declare divine reinforcements are backing my assignment in full.”

Speak this declaration aloud every morning for the next 3 days.

Affirmation

Heaven backs me.

I am not alone on this journey.

Angels surround my assignment.

I have divine support to finish strong.

What once felt impossible is now accelerated.

Because I said yes to finishing—heaven said yes to helping.

Testimonies

Elias, Brazil

“I was three days away from quitting a major project. I had no strength, no money, and no clarity. After joining Bishop Climate’s midnight prayer session, I felt something shift. I prayed for angelic help, and within hours, a stranger sowed into my vision and offered free resources. I completed the project ahead of time. It was clear—I wasn’t finishing alone. Heaven was helping.”

Olga, Russia

“I used to believe angels were just symbolic. But during a 21-day fast with Bishop Climate Ministries, I began experiencing divine interruptions—encounters, dreams, unexplainable breakthroughs. I was about to cancel my speaking tour, but I felt led to keep going. That very week, new doors opened, and peace flooded my heart. I know now—God sends real help when we refuse to quit.”

Real-Life Application

Your journey to completion is not just about grit—it’s about grace.

And grace often shows up in the form of divine help you didn’t even see coming.

When your strength runs out, heaven’s strength begins.

When resistance grows, reinforcements increase.

You are not behind. You are not forgotten.

You are surrounded by angels on assignment—and they are waiting on your voice, your faith, and your commitment to finish.

12. I decree that with God and His help—I will finish well.

Final Thought

You are not finishing by force—you are finishing by favor.

You are not walking alone—you are surrounded by angelic help.

Dr Climate Wiseman

There's more fighting for you than against you.

And now that you know, walk like it.

Speak like it.

Build like it.

Because when a finisher rises—heaven responds.

Day 23

Your Voice at the Gate: Decrees that Shift Atmospheres

There are moments in life when your next breakthrough doesn't depend on working harder, networking more, or learning something new.

It depends on what you say.

In the spirit realm, your voice functions like a gatekeeper.

It can open gates of favor, access, and completion—or it can leave gates locked through silence, fear, or doubt.

You are not just a dreamer or a doer—you are a decreeer.

God has placed power in your mouth to shift atmospheres, terminate delay, and release what's been held up.

You don't beg the atmosphere to change—you command it.

Today is about standing at the spiritual gates of your destiny and declaring with boldness:

“Let the finisher’s anointing break forth. Delay is over. I walk through now.”

What Does It Mean to Speak at the Gate?

A “gate” in scripture often refers to:

- Access points to territory or influence
- Spiritual thresholds of timing and transition
- Moments of divine decision or opportunity

The enemy knows this. That’s why spiritual warfare intensifies at the gate—right when you’re about to cross into something new.

But God gave you a voice to:

- Confront resistance
- Declare completion
- Align the atmosphere
- Invite divine backing
- Push destiny into motion

When you open your mouth at the right moment, you release heaven into the earth.

The Enemy Fears a Decreeing Finisher

The enemy doesn’t just fear your progress—he fears your speech.

Why? Because your declarations:

- Cut off delay
- Send angels on assignment
- Dismantle generational curses
- Activate divine timing

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- Block sabotage
- Pull down strongholds

You’re not just “speaking life”—you’re legislating in the spirit.

Every finisher must learn this: Your mouth is your sword at the gate.

Strategic Decrees That Shift Atmospheres

Here are examples of decrees you can speak daily at the threshold of new levels:

- “I command the gates of my destiny to open wide.”
- “Every demonic gatekeeper blocking my completion is removed.”
- “I release divine favor, strength, and acceleration into my atmosphere.”
- “I align myself with heaven’s timing and move into completion.”
- “I declare that what was stuck is now shifting. I am a finisher.”

Don’t wait for the feeling—speak the decree.

Your emotions may lag, but your voice leads.

Journal Prompts

- Where in my life do I need to stand at the gate and speak?
- What have I allowed in my atmosphere through silence or fear?
- What would shift if I spoke boldly and consistently over my goals?
- What does it feel like to take spiritual authority with my voice?
- Where has delay lingered because I stopped decreeing?

Action Step

Write three decrees that you will speak daily over your life for the next 7 days.

Make them bold, specific, and rooted in faith.

Then declare each one at the start of your day—before texts, tasks, or distractions.

Example: “I decree I will finish what I start. No resistance can hold me. I am moving forward now.”

Affirmation

My voice is a weapon.

My words align with destiny.

I do not speak from fear—I decree from faith.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Delay breaks when I open my mouth.

I release momentum, victory, and divine power with every decree.

I am a gatekeeper of glory—and I will finish strong.

Testimonies

Isaac, South Africa

“I used to be quiet in prayer—thinking God knew my heart. But through Bishop Climate’s teachings, I realized that breakthrough often waits on our voice. I began decreeing out loud, especially in moments of hesitation or delay. One day I spoke, ‘I command this deal to go through,’ and within 24 hours, I got a signed contract that had been stuck for months. My voice at the gate changed everything.”

Bella, Uganda

“Every time I approached success, something strange would happen—confusion, sickness, distraction. It wasn’t until I joined the 30 Days series that I learned the power of decrees. I stood at my home’s doorway and declared breakthrough over my life, finances, and peace. Within weeks, I received unexpected payments and clarity on decisions I had been delaying. Now I decree every morning. My voice has become my greatest weapon.”

Real-Life Application

Don’t just think about your breakthrough.

Don’t just journal about it.

Speak it into being.

If you're standing at the edge of something new, you must learn to speak from the gate, not just through the pain.

Your future doesn't need your hesitation—it needs your command.

Every “almost” moment in your life bows to the voice of a determined finisher.

“You shall also decree a thing, and it shall be established for you; and light shall shine upon your ways.” – Job 22:28 (KJV)

12. Let every morning begin with the power of my prophetic voice.

Final Thought

The enemy can't stop a finisher who knows how to speak from the gate.

Your voice is not just for expression—it's for dominion.

So speak up.

Stand tall.

And declare your breakthrough like it already belongs to you.

Because it does.

Finishers don't wait—they decree. And then they walk right through.

Day 24

Time Management for Finishers

Breakthrough isn't just a result of faith—it's a result of focus.

And focus requires one of the most spiritual skills many believers overlook:

Time management.

You can have the greatest ideas, the strongest declarations, and even the most angelic backing...

But if your days are filled with chaos, procrastination, distractions, and scattered effort—you'll stay in the cycle of "almost."

The enemy may not steal your purpose, but he'll sabotage your schedule.

Why?

Because disorganized people rarely finish anything.

If you want to break the curse of delay, you must start stewarding your time like a finisher.

Why Time Matters in the Spirit

Time is spiritual.

It's not just minutes ticking on a clock—it's a container for destiny.

God works in seasons, calendars, and appointed times.

If you keep missing your timing, you'll delay your breakthrough—even when it's been promised.

Here's the truth:

If your time is out of order, your destiny will be too.

That's why finishers don't just pray about results—they plan for them.

Signs Your Time Is Out of Alignment

- You constantly feel rushed, overwhelmed, or behind
- You start things with enthusiasm but don't finish
- You say yes to everything and accomplish nothing
- You multitask so much that nothing gets your full attention
- You stay busy but not productive
- You spend more time on distractions than on your destiny

This isn't just a time problem—it's a spiritual attack on your ability to execute.

It's time to take back your calendar—and turn it into a weapon of completion.

The Finisher’s Time System

1. Anchor Your Morning with Purpose

Start your day with 15–30 minutes of spiritual alignment: prayer, declarations, planning. Don’t let Instagram dictate your energy.

2. Prioritize by Impact, Not Emotion

Ask: What moves the needle? What brings me closer to my finish line?

Do that first—even if you don’t feel like it.

3. Block Time, Don’t Just Make Lists

Don’t just write tasks—assign them time blocks. Example:
“9:00–10:00 a.m. – write chapter draft.”

4. Eliminate Emotional Clutter

Stress, unresolved conversations, and disorganization eat hours of your day. Finishers create mental space for execution.

5. Master the Art of “No”

Every “yes” is a trade. Say “yes” only to what aligns with your assignment.

6. End the Day with Review

Ask: What did I complete today? What needs to move to tomorrow?

Give thanks for progress—even small steps matter.

Journal Prompts

- Where am I wasting the most time in my daily routine?
- What activities give me results—and which ones just drain me?
- What am I constantly postponing that needs to be done?
- How would my schedule look if I believed I was called to finish?
- What are three things I can remove from my week to create space for my assignment?

Action Step

Create a 3-day Finisher Schedule:

1. List your top 3 priorities each day (not 10—just 3).
2. Block 1–2 hours of focus time for each.
3. Eliminate one known distraction per day (TV, scrolling, unnecessary conversations).

Set reminders to pray, speak declarations, and celebrate completions, no matter how small.

Affirmation

My time is anointed.

I am not rushed, distracted, or disorganized.

I steward my days like a builder.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

I choose purpose over pressure, and focus over frenzy.

Every hour of my life moves me closer to completion.

I am a finisher—and I use my time like one.

Testimonies

Stefan, Russia

“I used to say, ‘I don’t have time,’ until I realized I was giving my time to everything but my assignment. Through Bishop Climate’s teachings, I restructured my mornings and built a daily rhythm. In just three weeks, I completed more than I had in six months. Now I plan my days prophetically—and I finish with peace, not pressure.”

Ines, United Kingdom

“As a mom and entrepreneur, I felt pulled in too many directions. I prayed for breakthrough but lived in burnout. The 30 Days series taught me how to treat my time like oil—not to waste it. I began scheduling God, rest, and purpose before anything else. My productivity skyrocketed, and I finally launched my online course. Finisher’s time management changed everything.”

Real-Life Application

Don’t spiritualize poor planning.

Anointed people still need calendars, focus, and discipline.

You’re not too busy—you’re too distracted.

You're not behind—you're just unaligned.

Time doesn't wait. But it yields to those who steward it.

Make your schedule match your destiny.

Because finishers don't just dream.

They plan, execute, and complete.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

"Teach us to number our days, that we may gain a heart of wisdom." – Psalm 90:12 (NIV)

Final Thought

You won't finish what you don't prioritize.

Dr Climate Wiseman

And you won't cross the line if your time stays out of order.

But today is your shift.

You have the grace to plan, focus, and execute like the finisher you are.

No more busy cycles.

No more wasted years.

From this moment forward—your time serves your destiny.

Day 25

Divine Connections vs. Destiny Drainers

Sometimes, the difference between “almost” and “all the way” isn't what you're doing...

It's who you're walking with.

The people in your life either fuel your purpose or fight it.

They either speak to your future—or keep pulling you into your past.

They either carry confirmation or create confusion.

In seasons of divine movement, relationships must be discerned, not just maintained.

To truly break the curse of “almost there,” you need to recognize the difference between:

- Divine connections – the ones sent to build, cover, push, and sharpen you
- Destiny drainers – the ones sent to distract, drain, delay, or detour you

Your assignment is too critical to be surrounded by people who are tolerating your calling instead of celebrating it.

The Power of Divine Connections

A divine connection is someone God places in your life to:

- Accelerate your assignment
- Challenge your growth
- Encourage your spirit
- Pray you into breakthrough
- Unlock new doors of favor
- See and support the real you

These are not just “good friends”—they are strategic allies for your destiny.

You don’t need many—just the right ones.

Signs of a Divine Connection

- They call out your purpose, not just your personality
- They push you to finish what God started in you
- They pray with you when you’re discouraged
- They challenge your excuses with truth and love
- They speak your future when you forget it
- They are not jealous of your growth

These people may not always be comfortable—but they are crucial.

God sends them to sharpen you, not to pamper you.

To elevate you, not to enable you.

Signs of a Destiny Drainer

- They speak more about your past than your future
- They downplay your calling or dismiss your progress
- You feel tired, confused, or emotionally heavy after talking to them
- They distract you during moments of critical progress
- They don't respect your boundaries, vision, or focus
- They subtly guilt you into staying small

Destiny drainers aren't always evil.

Sometimes they're just out of alignment with where you're going.

And in this season, alignment matters more than comfort.

You Can't Finish With the Wrong Crowd

Jesus had 12—but He only took 3 up the mountain.

Gideon started with thousands—but God told him to reduce.

Paul separated from Barnabas—not in bitterness, but in direction.

Sometimes, finishing means traveling with fewer people—but deeper purpose.

The longer you entertain the wrong voices, the more you'll question your own.

Let this be your turning point: release what drains, pursue what aligns.

Journal Prompts

- Who in my life consistently sharpens my purpose and encourages my calling?
- Who have I held on to out of guilt, history, or fear—even when they drain me?
- What relationship patterns keep pulling me back into delay?
- What would my progress look like if I were surrounded by divine connections?
- What kind of support do I need to finish well—and who provides it?

Action Step

Write the names of 3 people who are divine connections in this season.

Then write 1 step you can take to strengthen and honor that relationship.

Also, write down 1 relationship that may be draining your destiny.

Prayerfully consider if it's time to:

- Redefine it
- Release it
- Or reduce access

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Set clear boundaries this week to protect your assignment.

Affirmation

I walk in divine alignment.

I am surrounded by people who fuel my fire and speak to my future.

I let go of every connection that delays my destiny.

I honor those God has sent to sharpen me.

I build with the wise and walk with the focused.

I will finish strong—surrounded by strength.

Testimonies

Sebastian, Sweden

“For years, I kept people close just because we had history—even though they mocked my vision. I didn’t realize their voices were shaping my delay. After Bishop Climate taught on divine connections, I made some hard decisions. I drew new boundaries, started surrounding myself with believers who prayed and built. Within months, I completed two projects I’d been stuck on for years. My circle changed, and so did my speed.”

Stella, Switzerland

“I used to pour into everyone and always felt empty. I thought being godly meant never saying no. But I learned that alignment is protection. Through Bishop Climate’s mentorship, I released a draining relationship that had tied me to my past. The peace I gained was immediate. I started finishing things. I even launched a program that had been on hold for years. Destiny drainers were delaying me. Now, I choose divine alignment.”

Real-Life Application

You can’t complete a divine assignment with relationships that were only meant for a previous version of you.

Some people can’t go where you’re going—not because they’re bad, but because they’re no longer aligned.

Destiny requires discernment.

Take inventory of your circle.

Get honest.

Get clear.

And give God permission to prune what doesn’t match your finish line.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Walk with the wise and become wise, for a companion of fools suffers harm.” – Proverbs 13:20 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, surround me with those who sharpen my purpose.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Expose and remove every connection sent to delay, distract, or drain me.

Help me release relationships that no longer align with my calling.

Send divine connections—mentors, encouragers, and destiny builders.

I declare I will finish strong, with the right people by my side.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I am surrounded by divine connections who support my assignment.
2. I walk in relationship alignment with heaven.
3. Every destiny drainer is removed from my circle.
4. I discern who to walk with and who to release.
5. I am covered, supported, and sharpened by my tribe.

10. My circle reflects my future, not just my past.
11. I walk with wisdom, love with truth, and finish with strength.
12. This is my season of divine alignment and purposeful partnerships.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, expose every destiny drainer in my life.
2. Give me wisdom to release what no longer serves my assignment.
3. Send divine connections that strengthen and support me.
4. Remove emotional guilt that keeps me tied to the wrong people.
5. Anoint me to build healthy, purpose-filled relationships.
6. Let my friendships and partnerships align with Your timing.
7. Surround me with wise counsel and intercessory covering.
8. Deliver me from cycles of people-pleasing and emotional manipulation.
9. Give me boldness to guard my circle.
10. Heal my wounds from past disconnections.
11. Let every new relationship be divine, fruitful, and lasting.
12. Strengthen my ability to walk in love—but not in compromise.

Final Thought

Your circle shapes your speed.

Your finish is connected to your relationships.

Let today be the day you stop trying to carry people who don't carry your calling.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Let today be the day you choose connection over comfort—and alignment over approval.

You don’t need everyone.

You just need the right ones.

And with the right ones—you will finish.

Day 26

Momentum, Focus & Finishing Grace

Momentum is fragile.

One distraction, one setback, one delay—and what felt like unstoppable progress can suddenly stall.

You were running strong... then life hit hard.

If you've ever felt like you were just about to finish—but lost your footing, focus, or fire—this chapter is for you.

Because here's what you must know:

The closer you get to breakthrough, the stronger the resistance becomes.

But finishers don't rely on human strength alone.

They tap into divine momentum and supernatural grace to cross the line.

You're not meant to crawl to the finish.

You're called to run through it—with power.

Understanding the Battle for Momentum

Momentum is more than motion—it’s movement in the right direction with increasing speed.

But every time your momentum builds, the enemy attacks:

- With fatigue: to drain your energy
- With distractions: to break your focus
- With doubt: to paralyze your spirit
- With emergencies: to steal your time
- With delays: to test your endurance

This is not coincidence—it’s spiritual interference designed to halt your completion.

The solution? Finishing grace.

What Is Finishing Grace?

Finishing grace is the supernatural ability to:

- Remain focused when things around you feel chaotic
- Move forward even when you feel nothing
- Rise up when your strength runs out
- Complete what others abandon
- Stay in alignment with heaven’s timeline

It’s what came on Jesus in Gethsemane.

It’s what fueled Paul in prison.

It’s what pushed Nehemiah to build despite threats.

And it’s available to you—right now.

How to Maintain Momentum and Activate Finishing Grace

1. Stop Starting New Things Mid-Assignment

Momentum breaks when your attention splits. Focus on finishing one key assignment at a time.

2. Set Short, Daily Completion Goals

Momentum builds with small wins. Don't underestimate the power of consistent progress.

3. Protect Your Focus Like It's Sacred

Silence distractions. Guard your schedule. Give your assignment your best time of day.

4. Pray for Supernatural Endurance

Ask for grace—not just to move, but to complete. “Lord, give me strength to finish, not just to start.”

5. Speak Completion Daily

Say: “I am focused. I will finish. No delay can hold me. Grace is on me to complete.”

Journal Prompts

- What consistently disrupts my momentum when I'm close to finishing?
- What unfinished assignments are draining my focus?
- When have I felt grace push me beyond my normal limits?
- What would it look like to live with unstoppable focus this week?

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- What can I simplify to protect my momentum?

Action Step

Choose one unfinished task or project this week and commit to completing it—no matter how small.

Then, block two specific times this week (example: Wednesday at 9am and Saturday at 11am) to give it your focused attention.

Before each work session, speak aloud:

“Father, I receive finishing grace for this task. I bind distraction, delay, and doubt. I declare I will complete what I’ve started.”

Affirmation

I carry divine momentum.

I am not distracted, discouraged, or disqualified.

I have finishing grace, focus, and clarity.

Resistance will not stop me.

Distractions will not delay me.

I move forward—boldly, steadily, and supernaturally.

I am a finisher—and I will not stop until it’s done.

Testimonies

Daniil, Nigeria

“I would get excited at the beginning of projects, but somewhere in the middle, I’d lose steam. I thought I had a motivation problem, but through Bishop Climate’s 30-day journey, I learned about spiritual resistance and finishing grace. I began praying daily for divine energy and started setting short-term focus goals. For the first time, I completed a year-long business plan in 30 days. Grace to finish is real—and I’m walking in it.”

Sarah, Wales

“Every time I was close to completion—whether with school, relationships, or health—I would be hit with sudden chaos. It felt like something was always pushing me back. Bishop Climate taught me to protect momentum and pray for finishing grace. I fasted, stayed focused, and anointed my planner. I finished my degree, restored peace in my home, and launched a women’s support group. I’m no longer stuck—I’m moving forward.”

Real-Life Application

Momentum is not hype—it’s holy.

It’s not something you feel—it’s something you build and protect.

And when you pair it with the anointing to finish, you become unstoppable.

Don’t get distracted when you’re close.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Don't doubt yourself when resistance rises.

That's not your cue to stop—it's your signal to press.

Because you're not just trying to finish—you're called to finish with power, grace, and glory.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Let us not grow weary in doing good, for at the proper time we will reap a harvest if we do not give up.” – Galatians 6:9 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, I thank You for divine momentum.

Give me the grace to remain focused when everything tries to pull me away.

Remove distractions, delays, and discouragement from my path.

Breathe fresh fire into my soul to complete every assignment.

Let Your strength rise in me where my strength runs out.

I declare: I will finish, and I will not faint.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I carry divine momentum and supernatural energy.
2. Every distraction sent to delay me is broken.
3. I will not quit halfway—I finish what I start.

6. My mind is sharp, and my spirit is strong.
7. What stopped me before will not stop me now.
8. I guard my energy, protect my time, and value my finish.
9. Grace surrounds me like a shield.
10. Every unfinished cycle in my life ends now.
11. I decree breakthrough speed over every delayed area.
12. I walk in the finisher's anointing—and nothing can stop me.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, release finishing grace over my mind and hands.
2. Break every spiritual resistance sent to block my momentum.
3. Anoint my focus to stay locked on what matters most.
4. Give me clarity to complete what You've assigned to me.
5. Strengthen me in areas where I've been discouraged or distracted.
6. Cancel every demonic tactic of delay and confusion.
7. Let divine endurance rise in me.
8. Surround me with peace, power, and progress.
9. Guide my steps and guard my time from waste.
10. Cover every unfinished task with Your supernatural favor.
11. Restore every day I lost to spiritual fatigue.
12. Crown this season with completion, victory, and joy.

Final Thought

Finishing isn't just about trying harder—it's about tapping into a supernatural rhythm.

God doesn't just call you to the start—He graces you for the finish.

So when resistance comes, don't retreat—refocus.

When fatigue whispers, don't stop—declare grace.

Because you're not crawling—you're conquering.

You're not almost—you're right at the edge.

And now, with grace, you will cross the line.

Strong. Sure. Complete.

Day 27

Protect the Final Stage of the Process

Finishing is not just about completing the work—it's about protecting the work until it's fully manifested.

You can be 95% done...

And still lose the harvest.

The enemy doesn't fight the start of a thing—he attacks the finish.

Why?

Because he knows once you cross that line, a new dimension of glory, reward, and breakthrough becomes activated.

The final stretch is where destinies are either sealed or stolen.

And it requires discernment, intercession, and spiritual vigilance.

Just because the door is open doesn't mean it's safe to walk through unguarded.

This chapter will teach you how to guard the final moments of manifestation—so that what God has started in you isn’t sabotaged at the finish line.

The Final Stretch Is the Most Contested

Have you ever noticed that:

- When you’re close to finishing something, you suddenly feel extra tired?
- Unexpected distractions, drama, or crises show up out of nowhere?
- You start to doubt, delay, or disengage for no logical reason?

That’s not just coincidence.

That’s targeted warfare.

The final stage of any process is where the enemy:

- Sends last-minute temptation or confusion
- Stirs up fear of success or exposure
- Provokes attacks through people or problems
- Releases spiritual discouragement to drain your joy
- Plants seeds of anxiety and perfectionism to delay release

If the enemy can’t stop the process—he’ll try to corrupt the outcome.

Biblical Examples of Final-Stage Warfare

Moses struck the rock instead of speaking to it—and forfeited the Promised Land.

Samson gave in to Delilah right before his destiny was fully revealed.

Judas betrayed Jesus at the climax of His purpose.

Even Jesus, in Gethsemane, faced His greatest battle—not at the start, but at the finish.

This pattern reveals something critical:

You must protect your breakthrough—even as it's being birthed.

How to Guard Your Breakthrough Until It Manifests

1. Don't Announce Too Early

Premature exposure invites premature attack. Guard your progress until the timing is right.

2. Increase Intercession

The closer you are to completion, the more you must cover your work, your mind, and your space in prayer.

3. Watch for Counterfeit Distractions

Not every opportunity or invitation near your finish line is from God. Be discerning.

4. Stay Spiritually Clean

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Repent quickly, forgive easily, and remain sensitive to God’s voice. Holiness sharpens discernment.

5. Declare the Finish Every Day

Prophetically announce the completion—even if you’re in the last 5%. Speak: “It is finished.”

Journal Prompts

- What tends to happen every time I’m close to completing something?
- What spiritual patterns have delayed or derailed my final stages?
- Have I been announcing things too soon?
- What can I do to cover my assignment more consistently in prayer?
- What needs to be spiritually sealed before I call this season complete?

Action Step

Identify one assignment or area in your life where you are close to breakthrough.

Then:

1. Write out 3 prayer points to protect it.
2. Set aside a specific time for the next 3 days to intercede over it.
3. Tell only your spiritual covering or trusted intercessor—do not publicly announce it until release is confirmed.

Affirmation

I guard my breakthrough with prayer and precision.

I do not announce what God is still finishing.

I am covered, focused, and spiritually alert.

No delay, distraction, or deception can sabotage what God has started.

I cross the finish line fully protected, fully sealed, and fully victorious.

Testimonies

Mohamed, Senegal

“I used to share everything publicly—my goals, my progress, my plans. But I noticed things would always fall apart right at the end. After joining Bishop Climate’s midnight prayer and finishing sessions, I learned about final-stage warfare. I began fasting and covering my projects with specific decrees. Not only did I finish my app launch, but I also saw divine protection from sabotage. Now I move quietly and pray loudly.”

Nokuthula, Belgium

“Every time I was close to financial breakthrough, some unexpected expense would drain me. I knew it wasn’t just bad luck—it was spiritual. Through the 30 Days to Finish program, I learned how to pray specifically during the last phase. I stopped sharing too soon, increased my fasting, and anointed my plans. This time, I finished—and it multiplied. I don’t just birth destiny now—I guard it.”

Real-Life Application

Your destiny is holy.

It must be covered, protected, and sealed—especially at the point of completion.

Don’t get casual when you’re close.

Don’t stop praying just because it’s 90% done.

The final stretch is where the enemy launches his fiercest attack—because he knows your next level is real.

But with wisdom, prayer, and spiritual alertness, you’ll cross the line covered, complete, and crowned.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Be alert and of sober mind. Your enemy the devil prowls around like a roaring lion looking for someone to devour.” – 1 Peter 5:8 (NIV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, thank You for bringing me to the final stage of breakthrough.

Give me the grace to stay alert and discerning.

Protect every assignment I’m carrying to completion.

Cover my mind, my time, and my connections from sabotage.

Let nothing I’ve labored for be stolen at the end.

I declare: what You started in me, You will finish—and I will guard it with wisdom and warfare.

7. Let no opportunity be stolen or redirected.
8. Expose every hidden enemy sent to distract or deter me.

10. Protect my family, finances, and faith as I approach the finish line.
11. Release angels to surround me in these final moments.
12. Let my breakthrough manifest fully, and let no part of it be lost.

Final Thought

The finish line is more than a destination—it’s a spiritual gate.

And gates must be guarded.

Don’t lose what you’ve fought for.

Don’t expose what God is still perfecting.

Don’t relax when you’re closest to the reward.

Tighten your armor. Sharpen your sword.

And finish guarded, grounded, and glorified.

You’ve come too far to lose now—so seal it.

Day 28

Breakthrough Habits That Birth Completion

If you want different results, you need different routines.

So many people are praying for breakthrough, but still waking up late, scrolling aimlessly, and juggling ten unfinished tasks a day.

They're dreaming of completion—but their daily habits are built for delay.

Let this truth sink in:

You don't rise to your intentions—you fall to your routines.

Finishers aren't just prayer warriors—they are habit warriors.

They shape their environment, their calendar, and their mornings with intention.

They don't wait for motivation—they're carried by momentum built through consistent patterns.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Breakthrough is not magic.

It's the fruit of a disciplined, prophetic lifestyle.

Why Habits Matter in the Spirit

You don't just need a prophetic word—you need a prophetic routine that aligns your actions with what heaven is saying.

The enemy doesn't just attack your purpose—he attacks your patterns.

Because if he can disrupt your day, he can delay your destiny.

That's why every finisher must build daily rituals that reinforce:

- Spiritual focus
- Mental clarity
- Physical energy
- Emotional consistency
- Purposeful action

When you learn to dominate your daily rhythm, you'll stop living in cycles of "almost"—and start stepping into full completion.

Daily Habits That Birth Breakthrough

These aren't suggestions—they are weapons in your finisher's toolbox:

1. Morning Alignment (Before Screens, Before People)

Start each day with spiritual alignment.

Worship. Declare. Journal. Plan.

You are not a responder—you're a ruler.

2. 3 Completion Goals per Day

Don't scatter your energy. Choose 3 non-negotiable tasks that serve your destiny—and complete them before the day ends.

3. Sacred Focus Hours

Designate at least one time block (60–90 minutes) daily for deep focus—no calls, no messages, no distractions.

4. Evening Reset

Review your day. Celebrate progress. Identify what needs to move forward. Close your day in peace, not pressure.

5. Speak Your Prophetic Declarations Daily

Your voice leads your life. Don't let your day go silent. Speak life over your goals, your health, your time, your mind.

6. Guard Your Inputs

Limit toxic media, gossip, chaos. Protect your ears and eyes—because your focus is sacred ground.

7. Finish Something Every Day

It can be small—but finish something. Completion is a mindset, and practice builds power.

Journal Prompts

- What current habits are helping me finish—and which ones are holding me back?
- How do my mornings shape my mindset for the rest of the day?
- What would a “finisher’s day” look like for me?
- What small habit, if done daily, could radically shift my progress?
- Where is my time leaking—and how can I seal it?

Action Step

Design a custom “Finisher’s Daily Ritual” that you will follow for the next 7 days.

Include:

- Morning routine (prayer, planning, declarations)
- Top 3 daily focus tasks
- Time block for sacred focus
- Evening review or gratitude
- One small thing to finish daily

Commit to it—and track your momentum each day.

Affirmation

I am building the habits of completion.

My days are aligned, focused, and fruitful.

Every hour of my life serves my destiny.

I do not drift—I decide.

I do not waste—I invest.

I do not delay—I finish.

Breakthrough follows my discipline, and victory follows my consistency.

Testimonies

Omar, Lithuania

“I kept praying for breakthrough but never changed my lifestyle. I was sleeping late, skipping prayer, and multitasking everything. Through Bishop Climate’s teachings, I learned that habits are spiritual. I started rising early, blocking time, and making declarations daily. In just one month, I finished two projects I’d postponed for a year. My routine became my recovery—and now it’s my rhythm for results.”

Lily, Ireland

“As a mother and student, I felt overwhelmed and scattered. But God showed me that chaos was not from Him. Bishop Climate’s bootcamp taught me to create ‘finisher habits.’ I started my day with God, planned my time, and committed to daily completion. The peace I feel now is divine. I’ve become more productive, less anxious, and full of purpose. Breakthrough became a lifestyle—not a prayer point.”

Real-Life Application

Big wins come from small habits done consistently.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

You don't need to overhaul your life—you just need to own your day.

There is nothing more spiritual than a routine that reflects your assignment.

It's time to stop waiting on “the right moment” and start moving with divine rhythm.

Create the habit. Build the momentum. Watch the breakthrough follow.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“He who is faithful in what is least is faithful also in much...” – Luke 16:10 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, help me build the daily disciplines of a finisher.

Anoint my routines with purpose, energy, and divine focus.

Remove every distraction disguised as routine.

12. I am a finisher, and my lifestyle proves it.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, help me build habits that align with my destiny.
2. Break every daily pattern that leads to procrastination.
3. Anoint my mornings with clarity, focus, and peace.
4. Guide me to protect my focus hours from distraction.
5. Let every habit of chaos and confusion be uprooted.
6. Teach me to start and end each day in alignment with You.
7. Restore order and rhythm to my life.
8. Anoint my routine with supernatural fruitfulness.
9. Remove every emotional, mental, or spiritual weight from my day.
10. Let my disciplines open doors I could never force open.
11. Seal my momentum with grace and strategy.
12. Help me steward my time and daily routine like a true finisher.

Final Thought

Completion doesn't come from intention alone—it comes from daily execution.

The habits you form today will either break the curse of delay—or feed it.

So today, build a new pattern.

Shape a new day.

Declare a new outcome.

Because the finisher's anointing is not just on your spirit—it's on your schedule.

Build the breakthrough. Live the rhythm.

And finish what you were born to complete.

Day 29

Celebrate Early, Stay in Faith

Most people wait until the victory is visible before they rejoice.

But finishers understand a deeper truth:

Praise is not the reward of breakthrough—it is the weapon that secures it.

To break the curse of “almost there,” you must learn to celebrate before the confirmation.

To rejoice while you’re still in progress.

To shout before the walls fall.

To dance before the deal closes.

To thank God before you see the full manifestation.

This is more than optimism—it’s spiritual warfare.

Because praise does something powerful in the spirit:

It seals your progress.

It silences the enemy.

And it sustains your faith when sight tries to fail you.

Why Celebration Before Completion Is Strategic

The enemy’s favorite strategy near the finish line is discouragement.

He wants to make you feel like:

- “It’s taking too long.”
- “Nothing’s changing.”
- “Maybe it won’t happen after all.”
- “You’re still stuck in the same place.”

But when you praise God in advance, you:

- Prophecy to your future
- Shift your emotional atmosphere
- Strengthen your faith walk
- Disarm the whispers of delay
- Accelerate the manifestation

Praise isn’t just noise—it’s a sound of agreement with heaven.

Biblical Examples of Early Praise

- Jehoshaphat’s army praised before battle—and the enemy destroyed themselves (2 Chronicles 20).

- Paul and Silas sang in prison—and the doors flew open (Acts 16).
- Joshua’s army shouted before the walls of Jericho fell (Joshua 6).
- Jesus, at the tomb of Lazarus, thanked the Father before the miracle.

In each case, the praise came before the proof.

And it sealed the outcome.

How to Celebrate Early (Even When You Feel Behind)

1. Speak What You’re Thankful For—Even If It’s Not Fully Here Yet

Say: “God, I thank You for the completed assignment. I praise You for the opened door.”

2. Use Praise as a Response to Delay

When resistance increases, don’t complain—praise louder. Shift the sound in your environment.

3. Create a Finisher’s Playlist

Worship music that activates faith and joy should surround your space. Let praise be your daily soundtrack.

4. Celebrate Small Wins Intentionally

Every step completed is a prophecy in progress. Celebrate it. Document it. Rejoice over it.

5. Dance, Shout, Sing, Move—Release the Sound

Don't keep your praise trapped in your mind. Praise is spiritual warfare on your feet.

Journal Prompts

- What area in my life have I been waiting to praise God for until I see results?
- How does early praise stretch my faith and silence my fear?
- What does my environment sound like when I'm in faith?
- What happens inside me when I choose to rejoice before the breakthrough?
- What small victory can I celebrate today—even if it's not the full manifestation?

Action Step

Today, choose one breakthrough you're believing God for.

Write a praise letter as if it's already complete.

Example:

“Lord, I thank You for my completed manuscript. It is already blessing lives. Doors are opening, and Your hand is all over it.”

Then, celebrate it out loud—dance, shout, or sing like it's already done.

Do this daily for the next 3 days.

Affirmation

I rejoice before results.

I praise before proof.

My joy is not based on what I see, but what I know.

Breakthrough is sealed by my sound.

Delay loses power when I praise.

I celebrate in advance—because I am a finisher, and it is already done.

Testimonies

Gabriel, Netherlands

“I was so used to waiting for results before I celebrated. But through Bishop Climate’s teaching, I learned that early praise wasn’t fake—it was faith. I started thanking God every morning for contracts that hadn’t come yet. Within two weeks, I received two unexpected business partnerships. Now, I don’t wait to see it—I praise like it’s done. And every time, heaven responds.”

Tatiana, Nigeria

“I used to feel like I couldn’t celebrate until everything was perfect. But that mindset kept me in cycles of discouragement. During the 30-day journey, I began to dance every night—literally—over the breakthrough I was still believing for. My praise became my weapon. And not only did I finish my project, I saw provision come from places I didn’t expect. Praise changed my perspective—and sealed my progress.”

Real-Life Application

The curse of “almost there” loses its grip when you stop waiting for celebration—and start activating it.

Praise breaks paralysis.

Joy increases strength.

And a thankful heart attracts divine completion.

So don’t just believe in breakthrough—rejoice like it’s already yours.

Because it is.

Scripture & Prayer Focus

Scripture:

“Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I will say, rejoice!” – Philippians 4:4 (NKJV)

Prayer Focus:

Father, thank You for what You’ve already begun in my life.

I choose to praise You, not because I’ve seen everything—but because I trust You.

Let my joy be my strength.

Let my celebration become a sound that unlocks the supernatural.

I praise You in advance. I thank You with bold faith.

And I rejoice until the finish line is behind me.

12 Prophetic Declarations

1. I rejoice now, not later.
2. My praise unlocks supernatural progress.
3. I celebrate what God is doing—even before it manifests.
4. My joy breaks every heavy spirit.
5. I live in a posture of gratitude and faith.
6. Praise is my weapon, and I use it boldly.
7. I thank God for the finished version of what I'm building.
8. I don't wait to feel it—I activate it.
9. Celebration is the rhythm of my breakthrough.
10. My environment is filled with the sound of victory.
11. Heaven responds to my rejoicing.
12. I finish strong—and I celebrate early.

12 Powerful Prayer Points

1. Lord, teach me to rejoice before the result.
2. Break the mindset that waits for proof before praising.
3. Let praise rise in me even in the midst of process.
4. Anoint my voice, my dance, and my sound with breakthrough power.
5. Let joy be my shield from discouragement.
6. Help me praise with boldness—even when I feel uncertain.
7. Release favor in response to my faith-filled celebration.
8. Cover my atmosphere with the sound of gratitude.
9. Let early praise cancel spiritual sabotage.
10. Strengthen my faith every time I rejoice.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

- 11. Let praise seal what You have already started in me.
- 12. I decree: my celebration brings acceleration.

Final Thought

Don't wait for perfect conditions to praise—praise to create perfect conditions.

You are not “almost” anymore.

You're aligned.

You're advancing.

You're anointed to finish.

So lift your voice.

Release the sound.

Celebrate early—and let your joy prophesy your victory.

Because it's already yours.

Day 30

Finish What You Started—And Finish Well

This is your moment.

You've prayed.

You've pressed.

You've faced the patterns of delay, sabotage, and spiritual warfare that have haunted you for years...

And now, you stand at the gate of something new:

You are not just about to finish this process.

You are becoming the kind of person who always finishes.

It's one thing to complete a task.

It's another to break into a new identity—a finisher's identity.

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

This is what Day 30 is all about:

Not just breaking the curse of “almost there,” but replacing it with a mantle of completion that covers everything you touch going forward.

You were never meant to live stuck in cycles.

You were born to build, birth, and complete.

And now—it begins.

The Power of Finishing Well

Anyone can start.

Few finish.

Even fewer finish well.

To finish well means:

- You stayed faithful to your assignment
- You silenced the voice of fear
- You protected your progress
- You overcame spiritual resistance
- You crossed the line—not just barely, but boldly

And finishing well releases something that starting never could:

- Favor
- Fruit
- Fulfillment

You become the kind of person God can trust with more.

What Happens When You Finish

1. Heaven Celebrates

The Bible says we are surrounded by a cloud of witnesses—heaven rejoices when one of God’s children breaks through (Hebrews 12:1).

2. The Curse Breaks Over Your Bloodline

Every time you complete what your family never could, you’re rewriting history. Your children will know a new pattern.

3. You Step Into Authority

Finishers carry weight in the spirit. You now have power not just to complete—but to help others finish too.

4. God Unlocks the Next Assignment

Heaven doesn’t promote the almost faithful. It promotes the finisher. You’ve proven yourself—and more is coming.

How to Sustain the Finisher’s Lifestyle

1. Keep Applying What You’ve Learned

Don’t just finish this program—live it. Let your new normal include declarations, alignment, boundaries, focus, and praise.

2. Stay Connected to a Spiritual Covering

You need prophetic oversight and accountability. Keep connected to the anointing that helped you break through.

3. Build Finisher Systems

Calendar, clarity, checkpoints. You now live by order—not chaos. Success leaves patterns—create yours.

4. Teach Others What You’ve Lived

You have authority in this area now. Help someone else break free. You’re not just free—you’re a forerunner.

5. Mark This Day in Your Spirit

Never forget where you were when you crossed this line. You are not the same. You have stepped into a new you.

Journal Prompts

- What did I learn about myself during these 30 days?
- What specific patterns have I broken—and what new ones have I built?
- Who am I now becoming—and what does that version of me finish with confidence?
- What is the next big thing I will complete?
- How can I keep this momentum going beyond today?

Action Step

Write a Finisher’s Declaration Letter to yourself.

Describe who you are now, what you’ve completed, and what you are stepping into.

Read it aloud every morning for the next 7 days.

And post it somewhere you can see it—because this isn’t just motivation. It’s identity.

Affirmation

I am a finisher.

The curse of “almost there” is broken off my life.

I complete what I start, and I finish with strength.

Delay no longer rules my destiny.

I walk in divine alignment, acceleration, and authority.

Every unfinished place in me is now sealed with grace.

I don’t just start—I cross the line.

And I finish well—every time.

Testimonies

Sibusiso, France

“I never realized how deep the spirit of ‘almost there’ had buried itself in my life. Everything I started seemed to slip away before it manifested. After going through this 30-day journey with Bishop Climate, I started finishing things again—small at first, then bigger. My confidence, peace, and discipline returned. Today, I finished writing the final page of my first book. I am no longer stuck. I am a finisher.”

Elisa, Cameroon

“This course changed my identity. I was always known as the one with great ideas but poor follow-through. But something shifted as I kept applying the daily teachings—especially the focus on declarations and momentum. I completed a certification I had delayed for 3 years. More than that, I gained clarity on who I am. This isn't just content. This is deliverance. I am forever changed.”

30 Days to Break the Curse of “Almost There”

Real-Life Application

Completion is not a feeling.

It's a spiritual decision wrapped in discipline.

You've now proven to yourself—and to the enemy—that you do finish.

And you don't just finish—you finish well.

So the next time the old cycle tries to show up, you respond with this truth:

“That version of me is gone. I'm a finisher now.”

Let your new rhythm reflect your new revelation.

Let your environment match your identity.

Let your actions carry authority.

Because you've crossed the line—and it's time to live like it.

A Final Word From Dr. Climate Wiseman

Beloved,

I celebrate your breakthrough. I honor your process. I stand with you in faith.

As you go forward, remember:

What God has started in you, He will complete.

But you must continue walking in what you now know:

You are not who you used to be.

You are not stuck.

You are not delayed.

You are a finisher.

Thank you for trusting me to guide you. I look forward to hearing your testimony.

May your life shine with power, purpose, and prophetic clarity.

With love,

Dr. Climate Wiseman
